THE LATEST.

The Mount McKinley controversy has become heated in two Montana towns since the arrival of Dr. Cook, the explorer. Yesterday, at Missoula, Dr. Cook presented another affidavit made by a friend of E. N. Barrill, the guide, who recently made a deposition that Dr. Cook did not reach the summit of Mount McKinley. The affidavit of Barrill's alleged friend states that he had heard Barrill state that he (Barrill) and Dr. Cook had reached the top of the mountain. Dr. Cook also made another affidavit that he had scaled the lofty peak and would take a party next year to Alaska to climb the mountain again and bring back the records he had left on the summit.

Attorney General Breathitt has authorized the bringing of legal proceedings to prevent the merger of the Frankfort and Cincinnati and the Louisville and Nashville railroads. The Frankfort and Cincinnati is now in possession of the Louisville and Nashville. H. L. Stone, chief attorney of the Louisville and Nashville, has issued a statement denying that the purchase of the Frankfort and Cincinnati is in violation of the State Constitution.

Students at the Southern educational institutions are suffering from ptomaine poisoning, due to eating impure meats. Boneless ham, said to have been distributed from Atlanta, is alleged to have caused illness among the student bodies to such an extent as to cause the impairment of the institutions. More than forty cadets at the Georgia Military Academy are confined in Atlanta hospitals.

Following a revolt of Grecian naval officers led by Lieut. Tibaldos a brief engagement was fought at Salamis between torpedo boats in the hands of the rebels on the one side and warships and field batteries on the other. The torpedo boats retired after an engagement of twenty minutes, and are said to be headed for Crete. The Military League has repudiated Tibaldos.

Dispatches to Dun's Review indicate that expansion in mercantile activity continues almost without interruption and that depleted stocks are being replenished with some ungency, except in a few sections where buyers operate conservatively because of high prices. Curtailment of production at cotton mills is the only unfavorable feature of the industrial situation.

For the first time since his retirement from the Tammany leadership several years ago, Richard Croker is in New York City during the heat of a mayoralty campaign. Mr. Croker came from Europe, he insists, solely for the purpose of visiting socially with his old friends and spending the winter in the South. He crossed in the steamer Mauretania.

Prominent railroad officials, as well as the Mayors of all the cities in the State through which the road passes, gathered at Spartanburg, S. C., yesterday to celebrate the completion of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio railroad from coal fields of Virginia to Spartanburg.

Vital statistics for the first six months of the present year show an excess of deaths over births in France of 28,205. In 1908 the excess of deaths was 10,508 and this growing discrepancy has raised again a cry of alarm for the future of the French race.

For the purpose of expressing their confidence in Charles R. Crane, who was recently forced to resign as Minister-Designate to China, prominent business and professional men of Chicago have asked Mr. Crane to be their guest at a banquet.

A score of miners were killed by an explosion in the Rhymney Iron Company's colliery in Glamorganshire, Wales, yesterday. Manager Brown and two companions who attempted a rescue, were themselves overcome by the after damp and perished.

Joseph C. S. Blackburn, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, who arrived at Versailles yesterday for a two weeks' visit to his farm in Woodford county, denied that he had resigned the governorship and intimated that he would not.

Armed men made a raid on the Jackson Deposit Bank and forcibly removed the ballots printed for next week's election. The Sheriff followed the men, but withdrew when confronted with weapons in order to prevent bloodshed.

George Kreitz, of Mason county, whose home was visited by night riders, has signed his tobacco in the pool.

REBELS BEATEN OFF IN GREECE

Lieut. Tibaldos Leads Naval Officers' Revolt.

Attacks Loyal Warships With Torpedo Boats.

Military League Repudiates His Action.

ANXIETY AS TO NEXT MOVE.

Athens, Oct. 29.—After almost 2,000 years when Themistocles gained a memorable victory over the Persians, Salamis again to-day was the scene of a naval battle.

The correspondent of the Associated Press has just returned here from Scaramanga, whence he witnessed twenty minutes of fighting this afternoon between field batteries and big warships on the one side and the mutinous band of naval officers which quitted the capital Wednesday with torpedo boats on the other.

The first shots were fired soon after 4 o'clock and a sharp exchange of shell followed. Some of the projectiles struck the arsenal buildings, but the correspondent saw only one shell hit a torpedo boat, the Sphendona, which was immediately enveloped in a cloud of smoke.

Rebels Withdraw.

During the action the torpedo boats gradually retired, steaming backward until they obtained the shelter of the headland, when the firing ceased. The rebel vessels, while the engagement was in progress, returned the fire of the warships and field batteries, but apparently little damage was done on either side. The rebels were led by Lieut. Tibaldos and are reported to have numbered 300 men.

Athens remains quiet to-night, but much suppressed excitement prevails. An official statement has been issued stating that the arsenal, which was in the hands of the rebels, has been recaptured and that the mutinous torpedo boats are expected to surrender.

Dissatisfied With Compromise.

Lieut. Tibaldos appears to have been actuated by his disapproval of the tactics of the Military League and the junior naval officers in consenting to negotiate a compromise of the ultimatum recently issued by the Military League for the enactment of an ordinance suspending all promotion for five years and the abolition of the posts of Rear Admiral, Vice Admirals and fifteen places of lesser rank.

Tibaldos took a prominent part in the military movement last August. He was the first officer to go to the camp at Goudi, outside the city, after the Premier's refusal to receive a deputation of officers, and he subsequently was appointed commander of the rebel camp.

Decides To Go It Alone.

At a meeting of the Military League yesterday, Tibaldos said:

"I led the last revolt and without me it would have failed. Now you abandon me, but I will carry out a second revolt single-handed."

The Military League's proclamation disowning Tibaldos, who was in command of a flotilla of torpedo boats and submarines and demanding the portfolio of minister of marine, ascribes his pretensions to madness and the influence of outsiders and threatens to have him court-martialed for treason.

The league held a meeting late to-night to discuss what its attitude should be toward the naval officers who took part in to-day's fight. It is believed that the league is inclined to show them indulgence.

Worried Over Next Move.

Meanwhile the position of the mutinous torpedo boats resembles that of the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine which mutinied in 1905 and fired on Odessa and then roamed the Black Sea for several weeks, and the Government is apprehensive as to where it next will hear of them. It is rumored that they have gone toward the island of Crete.

In the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon Premier Mavromichalis, after detailing the events of the day, said the Government was determined to suppress the outbreak by force. Happily the movement was very limited. The ministers, he said, were occupied in reforms in all branches of the administration and would not neglect the navy. Therefore the officers' impatience was unjustified. The Premier added, however, that if the naval officers had been led astray they still had time to rehabilitate themselves.

Origin of the Trouble.

The following shows how the revolt had its origin. The Government, in response to the demands of the naval officers for the suspension of promotion for five years and the abolition of certain high naval posts, had consented to introduce a navy purification bill; but it insisted that the bill must be absolutely impersonal and declared that it would flatly reject any proposals aimed at individual officers. The Military League accepted this solution of the problem, but Lieut. Tibaldos spurned it as inadequate and secretly convened a meeting of naval officers who all signed a document laying down their minimum demands.

This document Lieut. Tibaldos presented Thursday night to Col. Tsorbas, head of the Military League, and at the same time appealed to the league to make him Minister of Marine. Col. Tsorbas declined to entertain the proposals and an angry scene ensued, Lieut. Tibaldos retiring from the scene to prepare for the revolt which followed to-day, and Col. Tsorbas to inform Premier Mavromichalis.

Costly Delay.

The Government, however, displayed curious hesitation. It took no steps to arrest Lieut. Tibaldos and permitted him partly to carry out his plans before any measures in opposition were taken. Even this morning, in order to prevent the shedding of blood, the Government dispatched a friendly officer to endeavor to dissuade Lieut. Tibaldos from his design.

The troops that had been sent to occupy the coast points were unable to prevent a number of Lieut. Tibaldos' comrades from joining him, and as he had but few officers to man his torpedo boats he commandeered the loyal fleet for his attack. It was not a very serious affair. Vice Admiral Budurls, who had command of the arsenal, was without means of defense and was compelled to surrender when Lieut. Tibaldos threatened to employ force.

At midnight troops still occupied the shores opposite the arsenal and were under orders to fire upon any of the mutineers who attempted a landing. Further reinforcements have been summoned from the provinces.

Blow To Military League.

The general opinion is that the Military League has suffered a great loss in prestige by reason of to-day's events and may be compelled to proclaim a dictatorship.

It is officially announced that only two of the men of the loyal fleet were wounded. The losses to the mutineers is not known. One of their torpedo boats was disabled and another took flight in the direction of Eleusis, on the Bay of Levsina. A third reached the Poros naval station, where it met with a hostile reception and again put out to sea.

The loyal fleet is now cruising off Piraeus to prevent any attempt at landing or an attack on town and also to close the Salamis Straits.

Former Premier Ballis in an interview to-night predicted that the upshot of the crisis would be the overthrow of the Government and the entrance of the Military League into office. This development, he thought, would not affect the position of King George.

SUES HOME TELEPHONE COMPANY, OF TOLEDO

HERMAN C. STIFEL WANTS LOOK AT BOOKS.

REASON FOR BRINGING ACTION IS NOT DISCLOSED.

STOCKHOLDER IN CONCERN.

Toledo, O., Oct. 29.—Interested persons here to-night do not disclose the occasion for the suit filed by Herman C. Stifel, a broker of St. Louis, against the Toledo Home Telephone Company, to require the company to set a date upon which he may examine the books.

The petition merely states that Stifel is a stockholder and that the company, upon proper demand, refused yesterday to permit him to make such an inspection. He also asks that the company be enjoined from removing the books from the jurisdiction of the court.

"As a voting trustee and director of the company, Mr. Stifel has had our monthly statements and could have any additional information he wants," said President Brailey to-night. "I know nothing of the reason for the suit."

Stifel is a prominent figure in independent telephone circles. He is also a director of the United States (Long Distance) Telephone Company. Both of these companies are included among the properties of which the syndicate headed by James S. Brailey, Jr., of Toledo, recently secured control.

Neither Stifel's attorney nor local attorneys for the Telephone Company would say whether the suit has anything to do with those deals or the recent rumor to the effect that the Bell Company had secured options upon the independent concern.

President Brailey said that he saw Mr. Stifel in Columbus to-day, but would not say whether they had discussed the suit.

Brings Similar Suit.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 29.—Suit for a writ of mandamus to compel the new long distance telephone company of this city to permit an inspection of its books, was filed before Judge Remster in the Marion County Circuit Court here to-day by Herman C. Stifel, of St. Louis, a stockholder. James S. Brailey, of Toledo, O., is president of the company. The suit is similar to that filed by Stifel in Toledo to-day against the Toledo Home Telephone Company.

SUFFRAGETTES HOLD SESSION IN GOTHAM

ONE THOUSAND DELEGATES MEET IN CARNEGIE HALL.

MRS. CLARENCE MACKAY PRESENTS THE PLATFORM.

DEMAND RIGHT TO VOTE.

New York, Oct. 29.—One thousand delegates, regularly elected at conventions held in every one of the sixty-three assembly districts of Greater New York, completely filled the floor of Carnegie Hall to-night at the first women's political convention ever held in New York City. Mrs. Clarence Mackay presented the platform, which was subsequently adopted. Peaceful as was the purpose of the convention, there rested in adjoining cloak rooms 150 policemen with night sticks in their belts. No call on their services was made.

The platform first affirmed "That men and women are born equally free and independent, equally endowed with intelligence and equally entitled to the free exercise of their individual rights; that the natural relation of the sexes is that of co-operation and interdependence, and that Governments which impose taxes and laws upon their women citizens without giving them the right of consent or dissent, exercise a tyranny inconsistent with just government."

It went on to recite that the full franchise has been extended to the women of Australia, New Zealand, Finland and Norway, and in all elections except for members of Parliament, to the women of Great Britain, Denmark, Sweden and Iceland.

Standing on this basis of assumption, the convention demanded: Amendments to State and national Constitutions permitting women to vote; amendments to the city charter requiring one-third of the Board of Education to be women; compensation for all civil service employes, including teachers by position and not by sex, and an amendment to the State civil service law prohibiting the exclusion of any citizen from any examination by reason of sex.

Republicans Refuse To Divide Time.

Cadiz, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Attorney General James Breathitt, of Frankfort, has been billed by the local Republican Campaign Committee to address the voters at this place to-morrow afternoon in the interest of the county and district Republican tickets. This morning the Democratic campaign managers of the county asked a division of time with them for the Hon. Denny P. Smith, Commonwealth's Attorney and the nominee for re-election, but the request was refused. However, Mr. Smith will address the voters at the courthouse as soon as Judge Breathitt concludes his speech.

SPEEDS ON TO NEW ORLEANS

Taft Hopes To Reach Crescent City On Time.

Passes Another Day of Vexatious Delays.

Natchez and Baton Rouge Welcome Executive.

BOATS IN THRILLING RACE.

New Orleans, Oct. 29.—Mr. Taft, after a day of vexatious delays, is again on the Mississippi to-night. There is every probability, however, that the presidential party will arrive at New Orleans on schedule time early to-morrow morning.

Under the original schedule it was expected that the Oleander would reach the outskirts of New Orleans two hours before the time set for the parade. In order that the President might have time to breakfast on board, it was deemed best to have the skipper slow up and arrive at the Canal-street landing at about 8 o'clock. The delay to-day will make this slowing down unnecessary.

Warm Welcome At Baton Rouge.

While the presidential party arrived at Baton Rouge over two hours late, the people were out in force to welcome him. Only one hour had been assigned to Baton Rouge, but the committee had crowded much into this time.

At the mouth of the Red River the President's fleet was joined by a steamer bearing a large party made up of the Mayors and other officials of several Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas towns. They were anxious that the Red River towns should be represented at the convention, which will work for the improvement of the Mississippi and its tributaries. Alexandria, Shreveport and Winnfield were among the Louisiana towns represented. Texas sent representative from Marshall and Jefferson, and among the Arkansas towns which had delegates on board were Camden and Texarkana.

Big Crowd At Natchez.

Not since the day the battleship Mississippi visited Natchez and won the river speed record from this city to New Orleans has there been another such crowd on the bluff as greeted President Taft upon his arrival at Natchez this morning on board the lighthouse tender Oleander at 9:40 o'clock.

The President was nearly three hours behind time. Eight of the other vessels of the waterways fleet were in sight when the Oleander pointed her nose into the bank. This was due to the fact that the Oleander, which shook off all the other boats yesterday in the run to Vicksburg and caused the Governors and Congressmen temporarily to desert their steamers for a special train, got into difficulties herself last night and could not make her usual speed.

Green Fireman On Duty.

One of the regular firemen had to be put ashore at Memphis on account of illness, and a green hand at the fires is responsible for choking them. Another reason for the long delay in reaching here was due to the fact that the boats arriving at Vicksburg after the Oleander last night crowded into the harbor canal in direct violation of the orders and blocked the exit of the President. The Oleander had to lay to for an hour and a half after casting off from the shore.

Every pilot or master blamed the other for the choked condition of the harbor, and it required a great deal of profanity and tact to get things straightened out. Once out of Vicksburg harbor, there occurred another incident which is likely to cause trouble to some of the river men. The steamer Erastus Wells won second place in the line yesterday in the free-for-all run from Helena to Vicksburg.

Exciting Race.

The steamer Alton, which is declared to be faster than the Wells, tried to push into second place as the Oleander was leaving last night, and for a minute or more there was an exciting and dangerous scene suggestive of the old days on the Mississippi.

Great clouds of curling black smoke poured from the two tall stacks set athwart-ship on the two boats and occasional flashes of flame burst from the black clouds. The masters were trying to push each other out of line as they rushed along.

The race continued until the two boats were almost at the stern wheel of the Oleander. As they came within hailing distance, Commander Tillman, admiral of the fleet, called some orders through a megaphone which set things straight. He directed the Alton to drop astern of the Wells and the race was over.

Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, under whose direction the steamboat service is, was on the top deck of the Oleander, watching the midnight race.

President Taft was greeted at Natchez by Mayor Benbrook and a reception committee. The Mayor made a brief address of welcome, to which the President made a happy response.

Leaving the steamer, the President and many of the visiting Governors who arrived on the steamer St. Paul, were taken for an automobile drive through the city. The ride ended at a court of honor on the bluff, where the President made a brief address. He was introduced by State Senator Engle.

The President's Speech.

President Taft said:

"I am very much impressed with my present environment. I wish to express to the good people of Natchez, and especially their common arrangements, my congratulations on this method of coming together with your visitors. It is certainly a unique scene, and taken with the trip which I had the honor to take with your hospitable Mayor brings me, it seems, into the very heart of the Southland.

"Natchez-Under the Hill we know of by report, historic lore, story and poem. Even the rough hero, Jim Bledsoe, had a wife, as I recall, 'one at pike and one at Natchez-Under-the-Hill.' And then from the scene of those tragedies shall I call them—we come to Natchez-on-the-Hill and find the evidence of chivalric life, that honest life of the South. The memory of those who enjoyed that life is a pleasure that can be known to few others in this world.

Cannot Live Without Cooks."

"After the beauty of this scene I hate to come to commercial questions, and one of the features of Natchez that for the moment I must enjoy is the presence of the old grandeur that is here almost beyond any other city that I know of in the Mississippi Valley. But we cannot get along without clothes and we cannot get along without bread and meat. The practical side of life must admit itself to us, for we cannot live on poetry and memory, and while this trip, undertaken under the auspices of the Waterways Association, combines most of the beautiful, it has also a deeper purpose, and that is to draw to the attention of the country the need for some action in developing the utility of the great waterway that flows at the base of these cliffs.

"The problem is not solved, but I believe it is in the process of solution. I believe it because we, of the American nation, admit no obstacle that we can overcome.

"We do not overcome obstacles by minimizing their difficulty, but we overcome them by a close investigation of what those things are and then a determination to destroy them, no matter what burden we may have to assume in order to do so.

River Like a Woman.

"The Mississippi River, I was going to say, (and we do say, because on the trip, you know, we do not have ladies with us) in its power, in its willingness to make eddies and trouble, in its beauty, for it has great beauty, as we saw when we came down, reminds one—dare I say it—of a beautiful and powerful woman.

"Properly directed, only by suggestion, she is the greatest aid to progress and happiness that we have in life. But treated without discretion, sought to be hemmed in where she will by the force of her character break out, she loses the opportunity for usefulness and sometimes wrecks everything that she strikes.

"And now that is the kind of a creature that the waterways association invites the Speaker of the House and his associates, a quorum, I may say, of the committee of the whole of the States of the Union to study, with a view to controlling so that we may make the most of her, and we are going to do it. Just how neither the Speaker nor I am inclined to confide in you at present. But such a movement as this, which gathers force, not alone in the Mississippi Valley, but throughout the country, is certain to

GEORGE KREITZ JOINS THE TOBACCO POOL.

Banker Longnecker Will Stick It Out—No Arrests Made For Mason County Raids.

Maysville, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The tense feeling over the attack of the night riders on the farms of Ben Longnecker and George Kreitz on last Wednesday night is still manifest here. Although the officials have been busy investigating, no arrests have been made, preferring to wait until their clews are more positive.

This afternoon Mr. Kreitz signed his tobacco into the pool, and returned to his home in the county. Mr. Longnecker has not signed up and says he will never do so.

HIGHEST PRICE OF YEAR.

Burley Brings Twenty-three Cents a Pound At Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The highest price of the season, as well as the highest average price for loose leaf Burley tobacco, was received here to-day when J. L. Johnson, of Woodford county, sold 4,000 pounds at an average of $16.43 a hundred. About 130 pounds of the lot brought 23 cents a pound. Lots from other crops brought 20 cents a pound.

About 70,000 pounds were sold to-day at prices ranging from 8 cents to 23 cents.

Capt. James T. Williams, of Woodford county, sold here at auction today 3,800 pounds of tobacco at 11¼ cents a pound. He also disposed of at private sale 9,000 pounds, to be taken at the barn on his farm at 14 cents.

ARMED GUARDS READY.

Night Riders Do Not Visit the Simpson Farm.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—G. A. Simpson, the prominent Grant county farmer who early in the week shipped his tobacco here on the stalk to prevent its being destroyed by night riders, on his return to his home last night to make the last shipment of his crop, was notified that the night riders would make him a visit.

A telephone message from his home to-day, however, stated that the raiders did not appear last night, as they had probably learned that Mr. Simpson had eight armed guards on duty and was ready to give the outlaws a hot reception. Under protection of the guards Mr. Simpson hopes to ship the last of his tobacco to-day or to-morrow.

LOST TWO DIAMONDS IN AUTOMOBILE RIDE.

N. C. Campbell, of Louisville, Says He Was "Doped" In Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—N. C. Campbell, a clothing drummer of Louisville, claims to have been robbed at an early hour this morning and left unconscious on the street. He lost two diamonds valued at $200, he claims.

"A few friends and I started out in an automobile last night to ride over the city," he explained. "We took a few drinks and I must have been doped. I remember nothing about being assaulted, but I know I became separated from my party in some way and what happened after that I cannot tell."

Two Municipal Tickets In Franklin.

Franklin, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—While the county ticket is without opposition in Simpson county, interest centers in the race for Mayor of Franklin, and it is safe to predict that every voter will be at the polls on Tuesday. Dr. W. H. Arnold, with six Council members, will appear under one device, while Mr. D. H. Hatter, with another set of Council candidates, will oppose.

MAY BE FROM IMPURE MEATS

Ptomaine Poisoning Cases In Southern Colleges.

Over Forty Cadets At Military School Affected.

Possibly Due To Ham Sent From Atlanta.

MANY CONFINED TO HOSPITALS

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 29.—With one Southern college closed, the student body of another all but depleted and the work of a third seriously impaired by the simultaneous appearance in these institutions of a strange malady, apparently of an epidemic nature, which for a time baffled physicians, but which is now—in two of these schools, at least—declared to be ptomaine poisoning, due to the eating of impure Western meats, a serious situation has developed for the consideration of the Federal and State pure food authorities.

Forty Cadets Ill.

This announcement was made here to-night in connection with the illness of more than forty cadets at the Georgia Military Academy, at College Park, eight miles from Atlanta, the majority of whom were yesterday rushed to Atlanta hospitals, seriously ill. The other schools affected are the La Grange Female College, La Grange, Ga., with two hundred students, which has left but sixty students, and the Athens Female College, Athens, Ala., with one hundred students, which closed early in the week.

Boiled Boneless Ham.

The eating of boiled boneless ham by the cadets of the Georgia Military Academy is believed to be directly responsible for the development of ptomaine poison in that institution. As Atlanta is the distributing center of a large section of the South, it is suggested by an official of the military school that the diseased meats found their way from Atlanta to the other institutions affected.

Alarming Situation.

"It is an alarming situation," he added, "and calls for a vigorous investigation by the authorities who have supervision over the food supplies, which are shipped into Atlanta from the packing centers."

At the Georgia Military Academy a number of the cadets ate heartily of the boiled ham Saturday and Sunday. Two sons of President Woodward were the first taken ill, and a score or more were complaining Monday morning. Tuesday forty-three were violently ill, necessitating the removal yesterday of most of them to Atlanta hospitals, after the college infirmary was filled to capacity.

First Stricken With Chills.

The afflicted boys were first stricken with chills, followed by vomiting, with pulse low and temperature subnormal. This condition continued with severe headaches and pains in the muscles and limbs developing on the third day.

Five of the boys have recovered sufficiently to go to their homes, while twenty-five are still in local hospitals and eight in the college infirmary. Several others are confined to their rooms.

School Will Not Close.

The student roll at the military academy shows an attendance of 165. The school will not close down, the authorities believing that the present situation is well in hand and are not apprehensive of the development of further cases of the illness.

The temperature of the patients in the local hospitals to-night is stated to range between 100 and 104, although the condition of no one of them is considered serious.

PUBLIC REBUKE TO SECRETARY OF STATE

CRANE'S FRIENDS PLAN BIG DINNER AT CHICAGO.

CONDEMN KNOX'S ACTION IN LETTER OF INVITATION.

DISMISSAL NOT JUSTIFIABLE.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—An invitation, signed by fifty Chicagoans who stand at the head of the city's commercial and professional endeavors was sent today to Charles R. Crane, whose resignation as Minister-designate to China recently caused a sensation. Mr. Crane, at present in New York, is asked to be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given at Mr. Crane's convenience.

The invitation goes into details of the recall of the former Minister-designate, upholding his attitude in every respect. Among the names attached to it are the following: C. L. Hutchinson, David R. Forgan, Charles G. Dawes, George E. Roberts, George R. Peck, D. H. Burnham, H. M. Kohlsaat, Harry Pratt Judson, James B. Forgan, S. M. Felton, A. J. Earling and Victor F. Lawson. The text of the invitation reads:

Charles R. Crane, New York.—Dear Sir: On behalf of a large number of your fellow-citizens we invite you to be our guest at a public dinner to be given in your honor on such a day as will suit your convenience.

We desire in this public manner to express our appreciation of your character and disinterested public services. We regard as not the least of the services your vigorous advocacy of the protection and extension of American commercial and political interests in the Orient, in full accord with the well-known views of President Taft, and with his epoch-making speech at Shanghai in 1907.

When the President appointed you Minister to China (an honor unsought and accepted by yourself) you accepted the position at personal sacrifice, and your many friends cordially approved the President's choice. Your intimate knowledge of China and its people, the wide scope of your experience in business matters throughout the world and your extensive personal friendship with many who hold responsible positions in foreign affairs contributed to your fitness for the position.

Your unusual discretion, prudence, wisdom and modesty had been demonstrated to us by an acquaintance extending over twenty-five years of an active business and social life. So far no conduct of your own has diminished our confidence in your fitness. We believe that the published circumstances, trivial in themselves, were unfairly made use of in an attempt to humiliate you without adequate cause, and we wish by this means publicly to protest against such methods, which cannot fail to have a tendency to discourage prominent private citizens from accepting public offices.

W. D. PARRISH LAID TO REST IN ST. LOUIS.

Retired Insurance Man From Kentucky Who Had Been Invalid Six Years.

St. Louis, Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The funeral of William Dudley Parrish, aged 83 years, a well-known retired insurance man, born in Lexington, Ky., who died Wednesday at his home, 6135 Kingsbury boulevard, took place this afternoon from the residence to Bellefontaine cemetery, the Rev. E. W. Russell, of West Presbyterian church, and the Rev. J. F. Cannon, of Grand Avenue Presbyterian church, officiating.

Mr. Parrish was a descendant of the noted English family of Dudleys. He came from Lexington to St. Louis fifty years ago. Up to ten years ago he was associated with the John R. Triplett Insurance Company. He retired at that time and has been an invalid for the past six years. He married a daughter of George Kingsland. She and their daughter, Mrs. A. W. Southward, survive him.

ARMED MEN SEIZE BALLOTS AT JACKSON

RAID BANK AND FLEE TO BREATHITT WILDS.

GUNS DRAWN WHEN SHERIFF DEMANDS SURRENDER.

LEAVES TO PREVENT TRAGEDY.

Jackson, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The boldest election outrage ever perpetrated in this county was committed at noon here to-day, when an armed body of men entered the Jackson Deposit Bank, and seized the official ballots for precinct No. 8. The ballots were carried to a house, where they were guarded by armed Republican henchmen until horses could be brought for their departure to the wilds of Middle Fork.

While they were doing this, the Democratic leaders secured a warrant of arrest for two men with a subpoena for the ballots.

Guns Drawn On Sheriff.

Sheriff Breck Crawford hurried with the legal processes to the house, and called for the ballots in the name of the law. No sooner had the Sheriff demanded a surrender than sixty guns and pistols, in the hands of desperate men, were presented at him. The resistance was so powerful that to save bloodshed, the Sheriff returned without the men or the ballots.

The armed men left town with the ballots as soon as the Sheriff departed. The band of men who secured the ballots have been staying in and around town for the last three days.

Will Vote Democratic Ticket.

Because of the unlawful course pursued by the Republicans in forcibly seizing the official ballots before the day for their legal delivery, many of the better class of Republicans are expressing themselves as being determined to vote the Democratic ticket.

After considerable difficulty, one man was arrested on the felony charge of fraudulently removing ballots. He waived an examining trial and executed bond in the sum of $2,500 to answer indictment.

FRANKFORT WINS

LOUISVILLE LOSES EASTERN STAR CONVENTION.

Officers and Committees Appointed By the Worthy Grand Matron.

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The seventh annual session of the Kentucky Eastern Star came to a close this afternoon. The 1910 meeting was captured by Frankfort by one vote over Louisville. It will be held the first Wednesday following the fourth Tuesday in October.

The committee on the Eastern Star Home made suggestions for raising funds. The chapter to-day raised $160 for the fund.

CONFEDERATES ATTEND FUNERAL OF MRS. HAYES.

Simple Services Held At Richmond, Va., Over Ashes of President Davis' Daughter.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 29.—Attended by delegations from the Confederate camps of the city, the Daughters of the Confederacy and a large concourse of citizens, funeral services were held at St. Paul's Episcopal church here today over the ashes of Mrs. Margaret Howell Jefferson Davis Hayes, daughter of the President of the Southern Confederacy, who died recently in Colorado. Interment was in the Davis plot in Hollywood cemetery.

Everywhere there were manifestations of sorrow at the death of Mrs. Hayes. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Forsyth, the rector, and were very simple.

PARTY FACING A GREAT DUTY

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, Speaks.

Democratic Opportunity Is Now At Hand.

Draws Inspiration From Recent Tariff Measure.

"OLD THINGS PASSING AWAY."

Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 29.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, addressed the Plainfield Democratic Club to-night on the "Democratic Opportunity." He found his inspiration in the situation presented by the passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, in the face of a very considerable opposition within the majority party, and the widely varying opinions of what attitude the Federal Government ought to assume with regard to powerful business combinations. Dr. Wilson said in part:

Facing An Opportunity.

The Democratic party is now facing an unusual opportunity and a very great duty. The party in power has become entangled with all sorts of interests, great and small; has lost its freedom of choice in a hundred ways, and may be said by reason of its peculiar policies to have allied itself with something less than the nation as a whole. The Democratic party, on the other hand, is free from entanglements and is at liberty to choose policies suited to the national conditions as a whole. It is free to make a programme for the general good if it will with perfect candor and simplicity.

Old Formulas Worn Threadbare.

But it should do this without allowing itself to be embarrassed by old formulas. Most of the old formulas of our politics are worn threadbare and have lost their significance. Take, for example, the old formulas with regard to strict construction and the old ideal of "as little government as possible." The indisputable fact is that the Federal Government has in recent years been launched into many fields of activity, even the existence of which previous generations did not foresee. It was inevitable, in our changed conditions, that the Federal Government should come out into many new fields of power. I for one am very jealous of the separate powers and authority of the individual States of the Union. But it is no longer possible with the modern combinations of industry and transportation to discriminate the interests of the several States as they could once be discriminated.

Debates of Coming Campaigns.

The party has always stood for a careful restraint of the powers of government, and the opposing party is not in derogation of its ancient principles. But it should, whenever national action is necessary, be shy, not of governmental power, but of its organization in the wrong way and its use to the wrong ends. The debates of our coming campaigns must center upon the means we are to use in accomplishing ends which the whole country sees that it is necessary to accomplish. The Democratic principle is that government should study not only regulation but individual liberty and individual responsibility, and that no regulation incompatible with the freedom and development of the individual is tolerable. This principle, rightly interpreted, leads to many interesting conclusions.

For Benefit of the Few.

Apply these doctrines to the great questions of the day and see what they will yield you. The original principle of protective tariffs in this country turned at every point upon this same object. The calling out of all the resources and energies of the nation and their protection against foreign competition so long as they should be unable to bear competition. The principle upon which the Aldrich tariff is based is a radically different one—not the benefit of the country at large and the careful stimulation of its many and various industries, but the benefit of those engaged in the protected industries, the incompetent along with the competent. It is a means of insuring profits to certain bodies of manufacturers on the plea that what they are doing adds to the wealth and trade of the nation, but without regard to the question whether they are adding to the wealth and trade of the nation in the way which is most wholesome and most suited to the common benefit.

System of Favors.

The whole system is a system of favors, by which not the country at large is profited, but certain perfectly distinguishable beneficiaries of the Government and the party which grants the favors. The demoralization of the whole thing, its corrupting effect upon our politics, its enfeebling effect upon our industries, its sinister effect upon our political principles, is now evident to every man who allows himself to think without obscuring his view by private considerations of a self-interest.

Indirect Taxes For Support.

It is necessary, under our dual system of government that the Federal Government should depend upon indirect taxes for the most part for its support and that almost all direct taxes should be left to the States for their maintenance and development. And it seems a perfectly consistent and legitimate principle to allow the element of incidental protection to come in, but it must not be brought in as a mere shield, cramping the life of ordinary purchasers. There could be no objection in such a policy if it were undertaken by a responsible party and adhered to with courage and consistency. The industries of the country should easily adjust themselves if proper time were allowed for the process.

Applied To Trust System.

Apply our principle to the trust question and observe what it will yield. We are at present trying the very hazardous experiment of regulating trusts in one or other of two ways. In the first place, we are attempting to restrain them from forms of organization and courses of action which are against the general interest by the compulsion of fines and penalties. These fines and penalties generally fall, not upon the individuals responsible, but upon the stockholders, who, under our present extraordinary administration of the law, are without any real power to control the business they nominally own. Fines also operate to take out of legitimate business large sums of money of which the public treasury is not in need of and whose withdrawal embarrasses the general process of trade and manufacture. It is a means of regulation which so far has certainly not accomplished its objects.

Control Through Commissions.

The other means by which we seek control is the government of public service corporations, as we have come to call them, through commissions. We have carried this method so far that we have virtually gone the length of dictating their management, which carries us very much beyond the point of mere control. We do not see the significance of this method of control at present because the commissions so far appointed have generally consisted of men of some wisdom and great honesty. But the method is only in its infancy. The opportunities it offers for political influence and individual tyranny every man who is well-read in the history of government can easily perceive.

"Patrician" is the result of the demand for a fine grade of footwear at a moderate price, by the class of women who take more than a personal interest in the selection of their footwear. The selected material, the modish creations, the superlative merit in designing and modeling, in making and finishing, all express their masterly touches which have elevated "Patrician" originality far above ordinary shoe making. Prices $3.50 and $4.00.

One Principle To Adopt.

There is only one principle in regard to these matters which the Democratic party can consistently adopt. It is perfectly possible to make all corporations so disclose the details of their organization as to make it evident to the officers of the law what official, what authority, from its board of directors down to its most subordinate responsible officer, is responsible for the acts of the corporation with which the law chooses to deal. That being done, it is perfectly feasible for the law to punish the person or persons directly who ordered any illegal thing done.

Old Things Passing Away.

We live in an age in which old things are passing away; in which all things are under scrutiny; in which the remembrance of Government by opinion and the general interest is as plainly forecasted by every sign of the times as it was in the period preceding the French Revolution. The world has learned self-control in the time which separates us from that revolution, and America, of all countries, is not apt to follow the hysterical ways which then set Europe in turmoil. It will use the ordinary instrumentalities of peace and counsel to bring the radical changes about which are now inevitable. The question I wish to leave with you to-night is: Will the Democratic party offer its services in the great enterprise?

COLLEGE GIRLS SLOW TO MARRY.

Only Thirty Per Cent. Enter Matrimonial State, Says Mrs. Boyd, of Atlanta.

Cincinnati, Oct. 29.—College education does not tend to encourage women to indulge in matrimony, according to statistics which were presented to the Association of College Alumnae to-day by Mrs. Emma Garrett Boyd, of Atlanta, president of the Southern Association of College Women.

Mrs. Boyd read a paper on "The College Woman in Home and Society" during a visit of the delegates to Oxford College, Oxford, this afternoon. According to the statistics which she presented, only about 30 per cent. of women graduates marry. The great proportion of college women, according to Mrs. Boyd, adopt the profession of teaching.

While matrimony does not flourish under the aegis of the universities, the same is not true in regard to the cause of equal suffrage, which, the speaker declared, was one of the most vital issues discussed in the women's colleges to-day. Mrs. Boyd did not commit herself as to her own attitude on the subject.

The delegates returned to Cincinnati this evening and listened to a lecture on the development of the public schools by Superintendent of Schools F. B. Dyer. A business session to-morrow will bring the convention to a close.

BRAND AS FALSE

Story That Todd Suggested Voting For Head.

FOLLOWERS OF INDEPENDENT MAKE SIGNED STATEMENT.

WERE PRESENT AT CONFERENCE IN QUESTION.

RECEIPT FOR MONEY PAID.

Branding as false the story which appeared in the Grinstead organ yesterday afternoon to the effect that George D. Todd had declared that the only hope for the Independent Republicans was to defeat the present administration by voting for W. O. Head, the Democratic nominee for Mayor, five of Mr. Todd's supporters, who were present during the conference referred to in the Grinstead organ yesterday, prepared a statement denying in detail the assertions purporting to come from J. W. Hopewell. The statement, bearing the signatures of five of Mr. Todd's supporters, follows:

Text of Statement.

In the Grinstead organ of this afternoon we observe a statement from Mr. J. W. Hopewell concerning a meeting at the Todd headquarters yesterday. We, the undersigned, were present, and when the party made the statement that Whallen had paid the Todd committee $5,400 it was denounced as an infamous lie by Mr. Todd. As to Mr. Todd stating that the only hope he had is to elect Mr. Head is also false. Mr. Todd made no such statement.

A part of Mr. Hopewell's statement is:

"To my surprise and indignation I heard Todd say: 'Boys, I'll do all I possibly can for you. I'll try to get some money for you, and we will push this thing to the finish. Our sole salvation is to beat Grinstead and call the bunch at the city hall and throw all our support to Head.'

"When I heard him say that I arose and told him that he could not throw me to Head; that I am a Republican and came into this campaign in a clean way; but that was his game I was out of it, as I would not have anything to do with a crooked scheme. I told Todd that I would go into the Twelfth ward and right it with my friends. I told him that I had the best following in the Twelfth ward, and that I intended to let all my friends know we had been led into a trap."

False In Every Particular.

This statement is absolutely false in every particular, as nothing of the kind was uttered by Mr. Hopewell.

The whole statement bears evidence of the methods of the corruptionists and bribe givers who are engaged in doing the dirty work for the "reformers' ticket" headed by James F. Grinstead.

Attached herewith is Mr. Hopewell's receipt for all moneys due him from the Todd campaign committee. Evidently Mr. Hopewell is engaged in playing the old game of both ends against the middle:

LARGE SUMS RAISED BY MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—More funds were raised during the past year by the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church than during any other time in the history of the organization, according to reports made at to-day's session of the fortieth annual convention of the general executive committee of the society.

That all arrangements have been made, and the $10,000 required subscribed for a new school in Rome, Italy, was shown by the report of the reference committee. Closer relationship between the young women's societies of the different denominations was the salient suggestion in the report on behalf of the home branch of the society.

Controversy Becomes Heated In Montana Towns.

DR. COOK "NAILS" BARRILL WITH ANOTHER AFFIDAVIT.

GUIDE'S FRIEND DEPOSES IN FAVOR OF EXPLORER.

GOING TO THE "TOP" AGAIN.

Missoula, Mont, Oct. 29.—The Cook-Barrill-Mount McKinley controversy was enlivened to-day by the announcement of the securing of an affidavit from George W. Solleder, a farmer of Ravilli county, living near the homes of Barrill and Printz, in which Solleder declares Barrill told him he and Dr. Cook had climbed Mount McKinley.

Dr. Cook's confidential agent announced that other affidavits had been secured, but he had decided not to make them public at this time, as the makers had been promised that the statements would only be submitted to the proper scientific bodies as evidence in the controversy.

Cook Party In Missoula.

Dr. Cook and his party arrived in Missoula late to-day from Hamilton. Dr. Cook would not discuss last night's meeting at Hamilton further than to say the matter had now sifted down to a point where it was the affidavit of himself against the affidavit of Barrill, and the matter could be settled only by an expedition to Mount McKinley to recover the records which he says he left on the peak.

The doctor reiterated his assertion that he would head a party of unbiased and unquestionable men to the mountain and recover his records.

The Solleder Affidavit.

Solleder, in his affidavit, declares he has known Barrill intimately ever since he came to Darby several years ago, and that Barrill often has told him incidents of the trip he made with Dr. Cook when they climbed Mount McKinley.

"He told me that he and Dr. Cook went up a stream as far as they could in a launch and then went on foot," reads the affidavit. "Mr. Barrill told me what articles they carried with them; he told of the trouble they had in climbing the mountain on account of the ice. Mr. Barrill and I are upon friendly terms and have no interest whatever in the controversy between Mr. Barrill and Dr. Cook, growing out of the trip to Mount McKinley, or any way connected with it."

Dr. Cook's Affidavit.

Being advised after his arrival here that the affidavit which he made on the platform at Hamilton last night, which, lacking the notarial seal, was not properly drawn, Dr. Cook made a duplicate affidavit in Missoula this afternoon, which was drawn in legal form and his signature to it acknowledged by a notary public. The duplicate reiterates the same statement made in the original written on the platform at Hamilton last night and reads:

"I, Frederick A. Cook, being first duly sworn, according to law, on my oath depose and say that on September 16, 1906, I was on the top of Mount McKinley, and on that date I left the record of our climb deposited thereon. Edward N. Barrill, of Darby, Mont., was present at the time.

HUGE ROCK FALLS AND BREAKS WORKMAN'S LEG.

Lambert Sebastian, a workman on the sewer construction at Baxter avenue and Beargrass Creek, was severely injured yesterday morning, when a rock weighing several hundred pounds became dislodged and crushed his leg. As soon as he could be taken to the street a physician was called and the injured man was removed to St. Anthony's Hospital. Here it was found that he had sustained a double fracture of his left leg below the knee. The broken bones were set and he is reported to be doing nicely.

Sebastian is an Italian, and as he does not speak English, it cannot be learned where he lives.

Frankfort and Cincinnati Merger To Courts.

Mr. Stone Issues Statement Disclaiming Monopoly.

NEW OWNER IN CHARGE.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Suit to prevent the merger of the Frankfort and Cincinnati railroad with the Louisville and Nashville railroad is being prepared by Judge John F. Lockett, Assistant Attorney General, and will be filed in the Franklin Circuit Court to-morrow. This will be the first step in the fight to prevent the merger and the case will quickly go to the Court of Appeals and probably from there to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Just when everything was at a standstill and it was thought that nothing would be done until after Gov. Wilson and Judge Breathitt return to Frankfort next week, the following telegram was received from Judge James Breathitt, Attorney General, addressed to Judge John Lockett, First Assistant Attorney General:

"Co-operate with the citizens of Frankfort and Franklin county to prevent Louisville and Nashville taking over Frankfort and Cincinnati. File suit at once if necessary."

Judge Lockett at once began preparation of the suit. He had already gathered data to be used in the petition to prevent the merger of the two railroads, so that the preparation of the petition was a matter of time only, and did not require much longer than the actual typewriting of the petition.

Statement By L. and N.

Henry L. Stone, the chief attorney of the Louisville and Nashville, accompanied by Assistant Attorney W. G. Dearing, came here this morning from Louisville to make a statement to Acting Gov. Cox and the Attorney General the matter of the purchase of the Frankfort and Cincinnati railroad by the Louisville and Nashville. It developed that a statement by the Louisville and Nashville was filed with Gov. Wilson in December, 1907, in which it was shown that the Louisville and Nashville had bought the Frankfort and Cincinnati, and further, showing that the purchase was not in violation of the Constitution, as the Frankfort and Cincinnati was not in fact a competing line of the Louisville and Nashville, the ultimate intention of the Louisville and Nashville was to extend the Frankfort and Cincinnati to the coal and timber fields of eastern Kentucky.

Already In Charge.

The attorneys simply called attention to that statement. It was stated that no rights of the citizens or taxpayers would be imperiled by waiting until next week, as the deed to the Louisville and Nashville had already been filed and the road had actually been in the possession of the Louisville and Nashville for several days. Gov. Wilson will return next Tuesday and it is expected that Attorney General Breathitt will also be here by that time, and these two officials will then hold a conference and decide what is best to be done in the matter.

Not Competing Line.

The statement of the chief counsel for the Louisville and Nashville is as follows:

It is insisted that the Frankfort and Cincinnati railway is not, within the meaning of Section 201 of the State Constitution of Kentucky and Section 768, Kentucky Statutes, a parallel or competing line, so far as the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company is concerned.

The section of the Constitution referred to declares that "no railroad * * * shall consolidate its capital stock, franchises or property, or pool its earnings, in whole or in part, with any other railroad, * * * owning a parallel or competing line or structure, or acquire by purchase, lease or otherwise any parallel or competing line or structure, or operate the same." In pursuance of said section the Legislature has adopted Section 768, Kentucky Statutes, which, as amended by the act of March 17, 1902, provides that "any (railroad) company may build such spurs, switches, tracks or branches as may be necessary to conduct its business or develop its business along its line of road, and for that purpose shall have all the powers and be subject to the same restrictions and liabilities as are conferred upon it for the construction of its main line, and may purchase the property and franchises of any other railroad company at public or private sale, not a competing or parallel line, and may sell its franchise and property to any other company not a competing or parallel line, or otherwise prohibited by law to purchase."

Supreme Court Decision.

In the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company vs. Kentucky, 161 U. S., 677, which involved the validity of the proposed acquisition by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company of the Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern railroad from Louisville to Memphis, there are some expressions which go to show that the constitutional or statutory provisions above referred to were not intended to embrace all parallel lines of all competing lines, and thus the court (p. 695) states: "Parallel lines are not necessarily competing lines, as they not infrequently connect entire different termi and command the traffic of distant territories." After citing instances of three North and South railways within the State of Connecticut the court further states: "These are strictly parallel, but only in a limited sense competing, since they are between different termini, and each is required for the trade of its own section of the State."

Not Parallel Lines.

Now, with respect to the Frankfort and Cincinnati railway, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company has a line from Covington to Lexington through Paris, as well as a line from Maysville to Lexington through Paris and another line from Lexington to Louisville through Frankfort, while the line of the Frankfort and Cincinnati extends between Paris and Frankfort, a distance of about forty miles, through Georgetown. These lines of the two companies cannot be termed parallel lines, because they have different termini. The competition between the line of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company between Paris and Frankfort via Lexington with the Frankfort and Cincinnati railway between Paris and Frankfort via Georgetown is very slight and comparatively insignificant. The two lines, in other words, are "in only a limited sense competing." The acquisition of the Frankfort and Cincinnati railway by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company would not be inimical to the public interests or to the patrons of either company.

Merely Extension.

The courts would, therefore, should a legal contest be made of the transaction, hold that the two lines are not competing in the sense intended by the Constitution and statute above quoted, and that the acquisition and operation of the Frankfort and Cincinnati by the Louisville and Nashville would practically be only an extension by the latter of its line toward the timber, coal and mineral regions of Eastern Kentucky, into which from Paris said line could conveniently and naturally be extended via Sharpsburg in Bath county or Mt. Sterling in Montgomery county, besides passengers and freight from Maysville and Eastern Kentucky, as well as from Winchester and points on the Kentucky Central, would have without change of cars a more direct route via Paris to Frankfort, the Capital City of the State, and to the city of Louisville, the metropolis of the State. The public policy of the State demands the early and complete development of these timber, coal and mineral lands in that section, for which a great necessity exists. Under these circumstances the courts would not be likely to enjoin the Louisville and Nashville from acquiring and operating the Frankfort and Cincinnati between Frankfort and Paris.

The Frankfort and Cincinnati for all practical purposes is not in and of itself a competing line, being a competitor to only a slight extent in connection with the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific railway (commonly called the Cincinnati Southern), with the Louisville and Nashville on through business via Cincinnati and other junction points to and from Paris. To be a competing line under the sections of the Constitution and statute referred to, which places a restriction upon the ordinary or usual right of one railroad company to purchase or acquire the properties of another railroad company, should be strictly construed, and where the conditions do not show clearly that the transaction would be invalid, the right to make such purchase or acquisition should be upheld by the State authorities.

In Bad Condition.

As to the practical effect of the proposed acquisition, it would unquestionably be to the benefit of the people served by the Frankfort and Cincinnati. That railroad is now in bad condition and furnishes but poor service to the public. If owned and operated by a strong road like the Louisville and Nashville its roadbed and other properties would soon be put in first-class condition, and it would be operated as well, at least, as the present railroad between Louisville and Lexington. No possible harm could come to any one on account of the acquisition and operation of the Frankfort and Cincinnati by the Louisville and Nashville, and even if unreasonable rates, which is not at all probable, were attempted to be imposed on the freight carried over the Frankfort and Cincinnati after the Louisville and Nashville took possession and control thereof, such an attempt could be reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the State Railroad Commission, and the rights of shippers and others interested could be thus fully protected.

No Competition In Rates.

In view of the fact that there is now practically no competition in rates between railroads in Kentucky, the only competition being in the character of the service rendered, it is to the interest of all concerned to better service that is to be given to the public and thereby benefit the public, which shall be the chief aim, while protecting the rights and interests of railroad companies of the State administration.

It is clear that so long as the Frankfort and Cincinnati Railway Company owns and operates as an independent company its line between Frankfort and Paris, that line will never be extended eastward or otherwise, nor is it likely to be improved or placed in a condition to give better service to its patrons.

Part of Great System.

The people and business men of Frankfort, Georgetown and Paris, when they take into consideration the present conditions and those which are bound to of the Frankfort and Cincinnati by the Louisville and Nashville, will follow the acquisition and operation doubtless foster, instead of instigate, any opposition to the same, especially as they will be assured that this short piece of railroad will be put in good condition and be made a part of the Louisville and Nashville's great system, while the rates in all probability will be made no higher or burdensome on its patrons and the service thereon, both to passengers and shippers, will be made first-class. It is believed that members of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, who are familiar with present conditions, if their advice were asked, would state that in their opinion the acquisition by the Louisville and Nashville of the Frankfort and Cincinnati would be entirely proper and beneficial to the public interests and conform to the public policy of the State.

FOR GOOD ROADS

COMMERCIAL CLUB ADOPTS STRONG RESOLUTIONS.

Lipscomb Delegate To Next Rivers and Harbors Congress At Washington.

Strong resolutions in favor of the constitutional amendment for the making and betterment of good roads in Kentucky were adopted at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Louisville Commercial Club yesterday. The resolutions were in response to a letter from Senator Joseph F. Bosworth, president of the Kentucky Good Roads Association, and read as follows:

"Whereas, The Bosworth-Wyatt good roads amendment to the Constitution of Kentucky, which passed the last Kentucky Legislature by its almost unanimous vote, and which is to be voted on next Tuesday, is of vital importance to every commercial organization in Kentucky and the entire citizenship of Kentucky, and especially of Louisville; and

"Whereas, If adopted, it means an era of road building and development that will improve conditions all over the State; and

"Whereas, It is nonpolitical and has the indorsement of both the great political parties as well as nearly every commercial organization of the State; therefore be it

"Resolved, That every member of the Louisville Commercial Club show his interest in the movement by appearing at the various voting places in Louisville and Jefferson county, and by doing everything possible to further the interests of this great movement."

At its meeting the board also elected over 300 new members who were secured on Harvest Home day. An open meeting of the club will be held during the early part of December to officially welcome them into the fold of the largest commercial organization in the United States. A special vote of thanks was tendered to Smith T. Bailey, chairman of the membership committee; A. B. Lipscomb, secretary of the Commercial Club; Col. R. S. Brown, chairman of the Harvest Home dinner committee, and all the workers who secured new applications for membership.

Capt. Brinton B. Davis, president of the club, has named Secretary Lipscomb as representative of this organization to the next convention of the National Rivers and Harbors congress, which will be held in Washington December 8, 9 and 10. Five or six more delegates will be named by President Davis in a few days.

REPUBLICAN

Party First To Disfranchise the Negro.

JUDGE DICKSON, OF BALTIMORE, CITES HISTORY.

WHY NORTH ADVANCES A THEORY, NOT A CONDITION.

CUSTOMS HOUSE SCANDAL.

Washington, Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Judge Harris Dickson, of Baltimore, throws a good deal of light on the question of negro disfranchisement, not by the Democratic party, but the Republican party. He brings out the fact that the Republicans themselves passed the first act disfranchising the negro voter that was enacted in the United States. In order to remedy the intolerable conditions in Washington they took away from all the residents of the District of Columbia the right of suffrage in order to eliminate the negro voter. This was done by a Republican Congress under a Republican President—Gen. Grant. Judge Dickson writes:

Reason For South's Attitude.

"The experience of the District of Columbia will illustrate quite clearly the reasons for the South's attitude. From 1871 to 1874 Washington was forced into an experiment with negro suffrage, which proved to be negro domination. A Republican administration under Gen. Grant wiped out the entire system."

Judge Dickson gives a lengthy account of the congressional investigation of "The Worst Government in the United States" during the period the negro vote ruled here. Volumes of testimony were taken on the manner of conducting elections and the methods of letting public contracts. Graft ran rampant. Rather than have the intolerable conditions continued the whites willingly gave up their suffrage to force the negro to do so.

Query of Northerners.

"Over and over again I have been asked by my friends in the North: 'Why don't you want the negro to vote? Why should Southerners object to a negro majority electing public officers?' Over and over I have given the same answer, 'Because we have tried it,'" writes Judge Dickson.

"Generally the man from New England will listen to no argument. He sees only one negro to the one hundred of population in his part of the country, and his theory holds good. Neither will the man from Mississippi listen to argument on the other side. He sees fifty-eight and one-half negroes to the hundred, and theories vanish in the face of such a fact. If Massachusetts had 1,641,127 negroes—or the same proportion as Mississippi—Massachusetts would have a condition. With only 31,974 negroes Massachusetts has a theory.

"Washington county, Mississippi, has 17,125 more negroes than the combined States of Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont and Maine. The South with its condition is in a position to speak frankly to New England with its theory."

Gotham Customs Scandal.

Collector Loeb, of New York, so thoroughly learned the art of self-advertisement from his former chief, Mr. Roosevelt, that it can be depended upon that the people are getting everything coming to them on the customs scandal in New York. The trial of the Sugar Trust cases showed conclusively that there was graft in the customhouse, and the developments of the last few days are simply a second volume. Loeb "set a thief to catch a thief," and the upshot will be that the thief who was "set" will escape jail sentence, but there is little likelihood that he will be retained in office. In order to retain these grafters Loeb is putting up a cry of wolf, his friends declaring that the fight on him is really a fight against Theodore Roosevelt. It seems, by the way, that all during the administrations of Roosevelt this New York customhouse stealing was going on.

Decrease In Railroad Casualties.

A decrease in the number of casualties on American railroads for the year ended June 30, 1909, is shown by a report published to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

During the year 2,791 persons were killed and 63,920 were injured on railroads, as against 3,764 killed and 68,969 injured during the previous fiscal year. This was a decrease of 973 killed and 5,049 injured. The report shows that the number of employes killed in coupling and uncoupling cars and engines was 32 per cent. less than during the fiscal year of 1908.

M'MAHON ACCEPTS LIFE TERM IN PENITENTIARY.

Murderer of Sisters and Brother-In-Law Permitted To Plead Guilty.

Kansas City, Oct. 29.—James McMahon pleaded guilty in court at Kansas City, Kan., to-day to the murder of his two sisters, Rose McMahon and Mrs. Alonzo Van Royen, and his brother-in-law, Alonzo Van Royen. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing. A Deputy Sheriff left for the penitentiary with the prisoner to-night.

Both McMahon and his family were eager to have the case settled immediately and they sought permission of the authorities to let the plea be entered without the formality of a jury trial.

Prosecutor Joseph Taggart asked McMahon a few questions about his age and occupation and the case was disposed of in less than ten minutes.

"I'm glad to get started on my term," said McMahon, as he started for prison. "They tell me Lansing is a pretty fair place to be in."

CHILDREN AT DETENTION HOME MAKE MERRY.

Twenty-three children were entertained last night at a halloween party at the detention home of the Board of Children's Guardians, 243 East Walnut street. The dining-room, playroom and hall were artistically decorated with autumn leaves, candies and jack-o-lanterns. Refreshments were served in the playroom, and from 6 o'clock until 10:30 o'clock the children made merry with games and having their fortunes told.

Those who furnished the games and decorations and assisted in making the entertainment a success are Misses L. B. Bensinger, J. B. Bakrow, E. V. Rosenberg and Mary Clarkson.

GOV. BLACKBURN

Back In Bluegrass On His Vacation.

HASN'T RESIGNED AND NOT ASKED TO QUIT.

WILL CAST A VOTE FOR DEMOCRACY TUESDAY.

GUEST OF HIS BROTHER.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Gov. Joseph C. S. Blackburn of the Panama Canal Zone, who arrived here to-day on his way to Versailles to spend several weeks with relatives and old friends in Woodford county, emphatically denied that he had resigned or had received any intimation that his resignation was desired.

Gov. Blackburn, who looked robust and hardy, and who said Panama agreed with him fine, left in Washington his wife and granddaughter, Miss Lucile Lane, who accompanied him from Panama, being impatient to reach Kentucky and "Old Woodford" again.

It was not generally known that Gov. Blackburn was expected here, but he had not been five minutes at the Union Station before the news spread abroad and friends from all over the city hurried down to shake his hand and welcome him back. He spent only a short time here, however, taking the interurban car for Versailles, promising that he would be back here in a few days to make a longer visit.

Emphatic Denial.

When asked if the published reports that he had resigned as Governor, or was about to resign, and return to Kentucky were true, Gov. Blackburn replied with characteristic emphasis: "No, I am still on the job, have not resigned and have received no intimation from anyone that my resignation is wanted."

Talks About Canal Work.

Gov. Blackburn is much interested in the work on the canal and talks freely and entertainingly about affairs there. He said that there are now engaged on the construction of the canal and in the Government service there an army of 36,000 men and that the work is progressing most satisfactorily. He described at some length a vast embankment that is being made in connection with the canal that will form a sort of levee, for an inland sea comprising 160 square miles, and which is big enough and deep enough to float the American navy.

As an illustration of the nonpartisan attitude of those engaged on the big canal, Gov. Blackburn stated that there are seven commissions in the Zone which have supervision of the various departments of the work, and that he did not even know the politics of the men at the head of these several commissions.

"Judging from the geographical sections, however, from which they hail," said he, "most of them being from the Southern States, I should suppose them to be Democrats. But there is no politics in the work down there—ability, efficiency and fidelity to duty are the factors that count."

Politics At Long Range.

Gov. Blackburn said that he had not been able at long range to keep up very closely with political conditions in the State, but said that he had gleaned from the Kentucky papers received in the Canal Zone that a hot campaign was on in Lexington and Louisville, which cities he said seemed to be the political storm centers of the State just now.

He inquired concerning a number of the Democratic candidates' prospects, and seemed as deeply interested in the success of the Democratic party in Kentucky as he had been when he was an active factor in its organization.

Will Vote On Tuesday.

Asked if he had come back to Kentucky to vote, Gov. Blackburn said with a gleam of his old-time campaign fire: "Yes, I am going to vote, if they'll let me, but you know folks who have been away from home some time, frequently have trouble in being identified at the polls."

Gov. Blackburn will make his headquarters during his Woodford visit with his brother, Capt. James Blackburn, and expects soon to be joined there by his wife and granddaughter. Gov. Blackburn is on his annual sixty days' vacation, having been absent from the United States since last December, when he made a similar visit.

WELCOMED TO VERSAILLES.

Public Reception To Be Tendered Gov. Blackburn Next Week.

Versailles, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Gov. Jo. C. S. Blackburn, of the Panama Canal Zone, arrived this morning and was given a hearty welcome by his friends and neighbors. He left this afternoon for his farm near Spring Station and will be in Kentucky until about November 10, when he returns to Washington for a conference with President Taft. "I found I would have to wait two weeks before I could see the President," he said, "and I decided I would rather spend that time in Kentucky."

Gov. Blackburn says that he has become a vegetarian and that it is agreeing with him. He has not eaten any meat since he has been in Panama, he says, and has been living almost entirely on fruit and milk.

The people of Versailles are planning to give Gov. Blackburn a public reception next week, which will be in the nature of an appreciation of his distinguished public services and the [illegible] he has shed upon his town and county.

CASE COMPLETED BY CONTESTANTS

Beginning of the End In Brannin Will Contest.

Court Proceedings Will Continue Into Next Week.

Propounders Put Witnesses On In Rebuttal.

EXPERT SAYS "INCOMPETENT."

Although the end will not come until next week, perhaps the middle of the week or even later, yesterday saw the beginning of the end of the trial of the contest of A. O. Brannin's will. The contestants finished their evidence yesterday morning with the testimony of Dr. W. F. Boggess, an expert, who testified that he did not consider Mr. Brannin competent, in his responses to the questioning of A. Scott Bullitt, who, with Burwell K. Marshall, is counsel for the contestants.

Not only did yesterday see the beginning of the end of the trial, but it saw the beginning of the tedious part, that in which witness after witness will be put on to testify that Mr. Brannin was fully competent, and to give their reasons for it. Court will reconvene at 10 o'clock this morning, and probably adjourn at 4 o'clock until Monday. It is rather expected that the testimony will be completed then, although Tuesday, being election day, will probably mean another adjournment. The summing up of the testimony will be done by counsel in their arguments. In the rebuttal testimony Charles H. Gibson, who, with Charles H. Sheild and David E. W. Baird, is counsel for the propounders, is doing the examining.

Proceedings Late Beginning.

Spectators and parties to the suit were late coming to the court room in the morning, when Judge Batson reconvened court. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brand and their two daughters, and T. G. Gaylord were those on the propounders' side who came first. Mr. and Mrs. George Ewing and Mrs. Benjamin H. Rirgely represented the contestants when Burwell K. Marshall read the deed by which John J. Otter transferred the lot on Fourth avenue, near Oak street, to Mrs. Fronie Brannin Ridgely, dated April 17, 1888. He then read the mortgage given to A. O. Brannin to secure money borrowed for the erection of the house that stands on the lot. This is the house that has figured in the case heretofore and in which Louise O. Ridgely has a life interest.

Dr. W. F. Boggess was the first witness for the contestants, testified as an expert as to whether he considered Mr. Brannin competent to make a will. Here Mr. Bullitt asked Dr. Boggess the hypothetical question, stating it from the viewpoint of the contestants. Dr. Boggess answered:

Dr. Boggess' Answer.

"I should say positively that he was not competent to make a will—lacked testamentary capacity."

Explaining his answer, Dr. Boggess said that, taking any hypothetical case, he said that any man who had chronic Bright's disease or advanced arterial sclerosis must suffer as to judgment. The first symptom of arterial sclerosis, he said, was loss of intellectual vigor and therefore a lessening of his judgment and testamentary capacity. Under the influence of Bright's disease he said a man is inclined to become childish, that they lack will power and judgment and would be easily influenced. There was no indication in the testimony that Dr. Boggess knew the name of the testator in the case. On cross-examination, when the other view of the situation was put up to him Dr. Boggess modified his answers greatly.

Dr. Boggess Shown Letters.

Dr. Boggess was shown the four letters Mr. Brannin had written in the last few months of his life and which have figured heretofore in the trial. He said they were wonderfully well done for a man of his age, in such a condition as he understood Mr. Brannin to be in. Asked about a vexatious and intricate law suit, he said, that if Mr. Brannin participated actively in that suit just before he died, he must have been of a remarkably vigorous mind. Asked if the drawing up of three similar bills in the last few years of his life would indicate a fixed purpose, the witness said it would do so to a marked degree. On redirect examination Dr. Boggess said that Mr. Brannin might have written the letters and still have been amenable to donination of others near to him and been easily influenced.

Dr. Boggess was excused and Mr. Bullitt asked for a moment's time while he said:

Contestants Finish Case.

"We want to see if we are through with our case."

Immediately, however, Mr. Bullitt and Mr. Marshall asked the court to hear them in chambers and attorneys and Judge Batson adjourned to the jury room, while the jurors had ten minutes to stretch their legs about the court room. After about fifteen minutes the jury got back in the box and this announcement was made:

"That is the contestant's case, if you Honor please."

That was what A. Scott Bullitt said to the court after argument in some time in Chambers when court was reconvened after the short recess. What the secret argument was about did not become known.

T. G. Gaylord, Jr., Testifies.

The first witness called by the propounders was Thomas G. Gaylord, Jr., son of Alice Brannin and grandson of A. O. Brannin. Mr. Gaylord testified as to the proceedings of a lawsuit in Cincinnati, saying that Mr. Brannin drew the first bill of equity in the involved case. The suit was in progress at the time of Mr. Brannin's death, and that he was constantly consulting about it. He said his relations with Mr. Brannin were very intimate and he knew the testator closely. He never had heard his grandfather had Bright's disease until he came to the court room, he said. The deposition of George Weaver Soper might have been influenced by feeling between him and witness, he said.

Mr. Gaylord, in refutation of the testimony of William Campbell, of Cincinnati, said that Mr. Campbell had often spoken of the marvelous memory and intellectual vigor of the testator shortly before his death. Mr. Campbell, said the witness, had little opportunity at best to become familiar with Mr. Brannin's real condition.

Exchange Waxes Warm.

On cross-examination Mr. Gaylord said that now he is a broker in New York, of the firm of Hutchison & Gaylord. After the death of his father in March, 1902, he remained in Cincinnati for a year. Mr. Gaylord explained a number of references to himself in letters of A. O. Brannin. Mr. Gaylord and Mr. Bullitt waxed warm at times in their exchange of questions and answers.

Mr. Gaylord identified his mother's handwriting in a letter which was handed him by Mr. Bullitt. This was on lavender note paper, marked with a monogram. It was dated last January, and was addressed to Miss Elizabeth Sherley, in care of Mrs. Ewing, in Maryland. In it Mrs. Gaylord expressed her congratulations and those of her daughter, Mrs. John C. Latham, in respect to the announcement of Miss Sherley's engagement to Tom Shevlin. It was affectionate in tone.

On redirect examination Mr. Gaylord said his father's estate was only $6,000, represented by life insurance. His mother, since a severe attack of typhoid fever had left her in a feeble condition, was subject to prolonged periods of loss of memory.

Mrs. Latham Testifies.

Mrs. Elsie Gaylord Latham, who is the widow of John C. Latham, and who was dressed in mourning, was the next witness for the propounders. She testified more in detail as to her mother's condition, saying the doctors had directed that she must not be drawn into this action or caused to give a deposition in the case. She told of having seen her grandfather many times shortly before his death. She testified that he was as capable of taking care of himself in New York City as any other man of fewer years. References to her mother affected her.

Cross-examined by Mr. Marshall, Mrs. Latham gave her recollections as to where her grandfather lived while in Louisville when she was a girl. She said that her grandfather died about three months after she was married and that her grandmother died about a year before that time. Mrs. Latham's position is rather unusual. She is a witness in this case, and, in her own interest, has brought suit to break the will of her husband, who gave a large part of his big estate to his native Hopkinsville.

Court here adjourned for lunch.

Mrs. Brand Goes To Stand.

Mrs. Lizzie Brannin Brand, the wife of the executor of the will, was the first witness called in the afternoon. She testified that she was married in 1866, and that thereafter up to the time of her father's death she lived partly with him and he lived partly with herself and family, but that during every such period they paid "board" to each other. She said that the terms of affection used in letters that had been read to the jury were his ordinary and natural means of expression. Mrs. Brand told of her father's leaving what is known as the "Ridgely house" to remove to her home on Fourth avenue and that, on his (her father's) arrangement she charged him and her mother $100 a month for two rooms. She confirmed the testimony heretofore given concerning his use of the back stairs, and said that her advice to him had been entirely because of her anxiety for his safety. She further testified to preparations for the New York trip, and said that her father always rejected any offers of assistance from other persons. She said she had a conversation with her father concerning his will in March or April, 1902. She said she observed him scribbling by the window and that he told her he was making memoranda for his will. Mrs. Brand said she told him not to think of anything of the kind that they (the children) had no thought of anything of the kind.

Mr. Brannin's Final Illness.

Mrs. Brand then described her father's final illness. She said he talked about various matters but that he had no business conversations. She said she never had heard that her father suffered from Bright's disease until she heard it charged in court. She said that Dr. J. W. Irwin attended her father in his last illness, after the death of Dr. Scott, who, she said, had been her own family physician, and told of the last illness of her mother which, she said, was not distressing except for lapses of memory.

Mr. Gibson then asked the witness whether her father ever used a cane or required the assistance of other persons, which she emphatically denied. He next showed her a photograph, which she identified as one made of her father shortly before he died. Mrs. Brand said that in the later years of his life her father "was right in the game" all the time, as Mr. Gibson expressed it, and that he never exhibited any depression more than ordinary after the death of her mother or of Brannin Sherley. Mrs. Brand had previously told of the birth of Mrs. Bettie Sherley and Brannin Sherley in her home.

Mrs. Brand said she was not sure about horseback rides taken by her father while visiting the Ewings at Baltimore. She said he always resented any offers of assistance in dressing himself or laying out his clothes. She spoke of the affectionate way in which he spoke of Louise Ridgely and Mrs. Shevlin, and said that he always spoke most gently and lovingly of them.

Testimony of Grandchildren.

A. O. Brand was introduced by the propounders. He said that he is the grandson of A. O. Brannin. He knew his grandfather intimately from 1890 to the time of his death. Never, to the last illness, he said, had his grandfather shown the slightest indication of mental deterioration. As to his physique, his grandfather retained his strength and vigor.

Following A. O. Brand as witness was Miss Bessie Brand, sister of A. O. Brand. Her grandfather, while very fond of all his children and grandchildren, she said, never hesitated to reprove and rebuke any one who incurred his disapproval, witness affirmed.

Mrs. Laura Brand Clover detailed her grandfather's visit to her home in New York in August of 1902. His physical condition then was excellent, and he once then proposed a six-mile walk through New York. He once, with long strides, to measure the width of Amsterdam avenue, over which he had had a dispute with Dr. Clover, stepped the avenue and proved his contention. Other extensive displays of physical endurance and mental activity such as an inspection of St. Luke's Hospital, where Dr. Clover is stationed. Up to the time of his death, she said, her grandfather was deeply interested in every detail of the lives of each of his grandchildren and children. Never had she detected the slightest sign of mental deterioration.

Mrs. Clover Attractive Witness.

On cross-examination she indulged in a few pleasantries with Mr. Marshall and got off the stand without having comforted the contestants a single bit. She said, incidentally, that although she remembered Louise Ridgely as a little girl she had not seen her since, until in the courtroom. Mrs. Clover is most attractive and made an excellent witness. The deposition of Dr. George F. Clover was read here. He is the husband of the preceding witness and pastor and superintendent of St. Luke's Hospital. His testimony was, in effect, much the same as that of Mrs. Clover. He was quoted as saying that Mrs. Clover had told him her grandfather's estate was comparatively small. He quoted himself as having said, when Mrs. Clover told him of the forthcoming suit:

"To attack your grandfather's will on the grounds of incapacity, is humorously absurd and impiously obnoxious."

He said Mr. Brannin was not subject to anybody's influence. The deposition, containing the record of both direct and cross-examination, was read by Mr. Sheild. It was lengthy, and consumed nearly an hour.

Other New Yorkers, who were acquainted with Mr. Brannin, had given similar depositions, and these were read when court adjorned until this morning.

PRINCE ITO

Settled Notable Disputes Favorably To Ameridans.

THOMAS SAMMONS, CONSUL GENERAL, KNEW HIM WELL.

STOPS OVER IN LOUISVILLE EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK.

TALKS OF LATE STATESMAN.

Thomas Sammons, who was Consul General for the United States at Seoul during the term of Prince Ito as Resident General, and who was Consul General at Newchwang during the Russo-Japanese War, left Louisville yesterday upon his way to New York after stopping here for a short visit. Mr. Sammons has recently been assigned to duty at Yokohama and is in America for a short rest before assuming his duties of his new post.

Both in Manchuria and in Korea Mr. Sammons was thrown into personal contact with Prince Ito. Especially was this so in Korea for the reason that during the reconstruction period in that country, which began when Japan took over the foreign affairs of the empire in 1905, there were numerous disputes between American, Nationals and Japanese and Koreans as to mining rights and other privileges in the Land of the Morning Calm. Mr. Sammons' personal relations with Prince Ito made it possible for him to take up with the great Japanese statesman, informally, many matters which it was difficult to settle through the regular official channels, and among the notable disputes he was instrumental in settling favorably to Americans was the famous Kapisan copper mine case, involving properties of immense values, claimed by an American firm under a title granted by the old Emperor of Korea just before the collapse of the native Government. Some $250,000, it is claimed, had been spent by the Americans in fighting this case, and it had become so widely known that it figured in a number of books upon Far East questions. It was predicted by Thomas F. Millard in his recent book, "America and the Far Eastern Question," that neither the Kapisan case nor any others involving the question of the rights of Japanese and other nationals to exploit Korean resources would ever be settled favorably to any but Japanese interests. It was through Prince Ito's broad-mindedness and his willingness to deal fairly with foreigners, for the benefit of Japan, as well as from a sense of justice, that the claims were settled squarely. Mr. Sammons was also fortunate in being able to direct the friendly attention of Prince Ito to the delicate position occupied by the American missionaries in Korea, and much friction was saved as a result of the Resident General's declaration of a square deal for mission schools so long as missionaries should keep out of politics. In all schools registered under the Korean Government the American missionaries are now authorized to teach the Christian religion as well as the usual branches of common school education.

Relations Always Pleasant.

Throughout the many controversies that arose Mr. Sammons and Prince Ito remained on amicable terms, and when Mr. Sammons was in Tokio in September he was the guest of honor at a banquet given by Prince Ito at his official residence.

Mr. Sammons declined, before leaving Louisville, to discuss Prince Ito, Japan or Korea, from a political standpoint. He declined to express any opinion as to the drift of affairs in Manchuria or as to Prince Ito's mission there at the time of the murder, but of the late Japanese statesman as he knew him he had this to say:

"Prince Ito considered the conquests of peace more permanently beneficial than those of war, and that thought characterized his life and work toward the westernizing of ancient forms of Oriental civilization. His biography will unfold the building of New Japan, and no romance will surpass in interest the story of his achievements and early adventures.

Prince Ito Was Fair.

"During his administration as Resident General in Korea negotiations were concluded involving problems affecting the profitable exploitation of from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 worth of American mining properties, and the future successful activities of hundreds of American missionaries. These negotiations were concluded in a manner satisfactory to Americans, and brought forth commendation from all Americans concerned. Many of these problems involved delicate questions of equity as well as the technical interpretation of procedure, and of concessions granted under the former Korean Government. It became necessary in seeking the adjustment of matters of this nature favorably to American interests to appeal frequently to the Resident General for assistance. I always found him courteous and considerate of the rights of Americans when the facts in the case were presented in a manner that aroused his interest and enlisted his support. No important American claims were left unsettled, and all were ultimately disposed of satisfactorily to Americans, who, by the way, represent 75 per cent. of the mining and missionary activity in Korea."

Mr. Sammons left yesterday for New York, where he will spend some time at his home before returning to the Far East to assume his duties at Yokohama.

Capt. Moss had been in the insurance business for the past thirty years.

CAPT. U. F. MOSS.

In that time he served as president of the Kentucky and Tennessee Underwriters' Association, in 1898, and he had in his time been identified with some of the most prominent insurance companies of this country and Europe. At the time of his death he was a special agent for the National Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn.

A lifelong Democrat, Capt. Moss took an active interest in the coming election. Capt. Moss was a native of Kentucky and was graduated from Centre College with high honors. He was a member of the Masonic order. He is survived by his widow and five sons.

MAKES STATEMENT AS TO HIS SON'S SURRENDER.

The Rev. C. C. Bates, colored, pastor of the Lampton Baptist church and father of Eugene Bates, who is in jail on the charge of having murdered Patrolman Cannon, denies that he told Col. Haager, Chief of Police, that he would get word to his son to return to Louisville and surrender. He said yesterday that if his son did shoot Patrolman Cannon he feels convinced that he acted in self-defense.

MEMORIAL

Services In Honor of Judge Lindsay.

APPELLATE COURT FIXES NOVEMBER 5 AS DATE.

EMPLOYERS NOT LIABLE FOR AGENT'S STATEMENT.

ALLEGED "DRY" CONTRIBUTION

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The Court of Appeals, after conference with Gen. D. W. Lindsey, who represented the Frankfort Bar Association, has fixed Friday, November 5, as the date for holding memorial services in honor of the late William Lindsay, who was from 1876 to 1878 the Chief Justice of Kentucky. It is expected that many prominent lawyers from all sections of the State will be present on that occasion and pay tribute to the distinguished man who died a few days ago.

Court of Appeals.

Judgment of the Jefferson Circuit Court was affirmed by the Court of Appeals in the case of the Dequesne Distributing Company against Joseph Greenbaum. The original suit was for slander. An agent of Greenbaum was charged with saying of the appellant that he had contributed $10,000 to the prohibition movement. It was charged that the remark about the campaign contribution had interfered with the sale of a medicine which is sold in saloons, and which is distributed by the appellant. The court here says that the Greenbaum Company is not responsible for statements its agents make unless the principal directs or authorizes the agent to speak.

The court affirmed the judgment of the Jessamine Circuit Court in the case of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific railway against Walter Strosnider. He was given $750 damages for being carried past his station by a train which did not stop at Nicholasville.

Judgment of the Henderson Circuit Court was reversed in the case of D. A. Howard against the Henderson Traction Company. Howard was injured by jumping from a street car which had become unmanageable on the second trial of the case he was given a verdict of $195. The court says he is entitled to recover for pain suffered.

The verdict of life imprisonment in the penitentiary imposed upon John Sprouse, in Carter county, is set aside by the court and the lower court is ordered to give peremptory instruction for acquittal. Sprouse was convicted on a charge of burning a house and causing the death of Dovie Cooper, who was sleeping in the building. The court here says there is nothing to show that the fire was other than accidental.

Law Certified.

The court, through Judge Barker, certified the law in the case of the Commonwealth against Fred Marcum, from Lawrence county. Marcum was indicted for murder for the killing of John Whittaker. On his trial the jury disagreed. The Commonwealth's Attorney asked the higher court to certify the law for the next trial. Marcum was town marshal of Louisa and upon request of a Chesapeake and Ohio conductor sought to arrest Whittaker. They were on a train and Whittaker was disorderly. He resisted and the killing followed. The court here upholds the law giving a conductor the right to summon peace officers to arrest disorderly persons on trains without the necessity for a warrant.

Orders For Inspection.

But two men have qualified as experts on the long distance range at Kennebec Station so far, but the Louisville and Lexington sharpshooters have not gotten in their work yet. One of the best scores ever made at the long-range targets was that hung up by Capt. Jackson Morris when he scored 49 out of a possible 50 at the 800-yard targets. Capt. Morris qualified as expert on both the 800 and 1,000-yard ranges. Col. R. N. Krieger shot well at 800 yards, but will have to shoot his 1,000-yard range over again.

Orders are being prepared by the Adjutant General's department for an inspection of the First Regiment at Louisville. Col. Grinstead has asked that the inspection be postponed a week or two, as he desires to have his regiment in tip-top shape, so a date suitable to him will probably be selected.

CAPT. E. L. DORSEY BACK FROM JAUNT WITH TAFT.

Capt. E. L. Dorsey, supervising inspector of steam vessels for the Louisville district, returned yesterday morning from a little jaunt with President Taft and party through the waters under which he has jurisdiction. In fact, Capt. Dorsey boarded a steamer at St. Louis, but his district was not reached until the fleet got to Cairo. Capt. Dorsey said that he had a most delightful time. He left the fleet at Helena, Ark., the extreme southern limit of his district. Capt. Dorsey did not try to explain why the schedule went to pieces after the fleet left Memphis, but the general impression is that the schedule was too fast for a lot of the boats in the fleet. This fact alone is evidence and argument for better river improvements.

MUCH BUSINESS

TRANSACTED BY NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

Meeting At Bowling Green Attended By Ninety Members and Thirty Visitors.

Louisville delegates to the one hundred and eighth annual meeting of the Northern Presbyterian Synod of Kentucky have returned from Bowling Green, where one of the most interesting and profitable conferences came to a close on October 28. The following is a summary of the proceedings of the meeting:

There were present ninety members, with some thirty visitors from various parts of the State, attending the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society in session at the same time in the First Presbyterian church. The Rev. M. V. P. Yeaman, of Harrodsburg, was elected moderator, and Prof. J. C. Acheson, of Danville, was appointed vice moderator. A number of outside ministers of note were present and made addresses. Among them were the Rev. J. M. Barclay, D. D., of Detroit, Mich., moderator of the last general assembly; the Rev. B. P. Fullerton, D. D., of St. Louis; the Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., of Philadelphia, Pa.; the Rev. W. A. Provine, D. D., of Nashville; the Rev. W. J. Darby, D. D., of Evansville; J. Ernest McAfee, of New York City; the Rev. George S. J. Browne, of Cincinnati; J. M. Patterson, of St. Louis; the Rev. George H. Trull, of New York; Judge Holt, of Pewee Valley; J. S. Hawthorne, of Princeton; the Rev. John Ervin, of Dayton; the Rev. Charles L. Reynolds, of Lexington; the Rev. H. G. Moody, of Mt. Sterling; Evangelist F. E. Moore and J. F. Price, the Rev. E. H. Bull, of Hopkinsville, and Judge Goodnight, of Franklin.

The most important work before the synod was that of home missions, of which report was made by the Rev. W. Francis Irwin, of Louisville, chairman of the synod's executive committee on missions. The Rev. H. S. Murdock, synodical superintendent, discussed the school and mountain work, and it was announced, after a conference between the committee and the representatives of the New York board, that the synod would enter upon a new era, with the supervision of all work of the State, involving some $13,000 annually, intrusted to its care.

The proceedings also embraced reports on the various branches of church work—Caldwell College, Auburn Seminary and the Presbyterian students in the State University. The chairmen reporting were J. F. Record, bills and overtures; J. S. Grider, judicial business; Thomas McCullough, finance; George A. Joplin, leave of absence, and Carl Michel, on resolutions.

Dr. Barbour presented the interest of Pikeville College. The report on Central University was made by Dr. Blackburn, followed by a stirring address by President Hinitt, and the Theological Seminary report was made by the Rev. J. R. Ziegler, of Frankfort.

A request from the general assembly was complied with in the appointment of the Rev. F. J. Cheek, D. D., as a representative of this synod in the meeting of the advisory council on home missions.

It was announced that the Lancaster Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. C. C. Brown is pastor, had increased its subscription to the work of home missions in the mountains from $50 to $500. An enthusiastic meeting on the interest of home missions was held on Wednesday night and a similar meeting on foreign missions was held on Thursday night.

The industrial work established at Camp Nelson was commended to the sympathy and interest of all churches. The synod adjourned to meet at Harrodsburg the fourth Tuesday of October, 1910.

Odds Democrats Will Win Fayette Judgeship.

ANY AMOUNT READY AT THE BROKERS' OFFICE.

JOHN M'LAUGHLIN BETS "BUB" MAY $1,000 TO $800.

HARD TO MAKE A WAGER.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The betting odds are decidedly in favor of the Democrats in the races for local offices here, with few takers on the part of the Fusionists, even when better than even money is offered them. A local broker to-day posted an announcement that they will take bets to any amount on George R. Hunt, Democratic candidate for Circuit Judge, at odds of 5 to 4 on Hunt.

Last night "Bub" May, the well-known turfman and trainer, who is a red-hot Fusion supporter, was talking about the Fusion ticket having a walkover. John McLaughlin, the half owner of Jeff Bernsetein and seller of the auction pools at the Lexington and Louisville tracks, grew bored and urged him to go and cool out.

Thousand To Eight Hundred.

"Go away, Bub, your dope is bad," said McLaughlin.

"Right from the feed box, that talk," responded Bub.

"I see it is; there's some hay in your chops now."

"That'll be all right, but the Democratic ticket hasn't got a look-in for the race next Tuesday."

"For how much?"

"Oh, I won't bet ticket against ticket, but I will bet that Parker beats Hunt."

"You will?" slowly asked McLaughline, as his hand went into his pocket. "Well, how much'?"

"Oh, about a thousand," replied May, as he brought out his roll.

"Your on for a thousands at evens," said McLaughlin quickly.

"No, no, not evens," responded May. "I want 5 to 4—a thousand to eight hundred."

"You are not quite as confident as you were a moment ago, Bub, but the bet goes. Here's a thousand; get up your eight hundred."

"I find that I havent' got that much with me," replied May, "But—"

"But nothing," said McLaughlin. "Your check is good with me; just put up the paper instead of the cash. You're too good a fish to let wiggle off."

Another Bet.

May put up his check for $800 and the odds were established at 5 to 4, with Hunt the favorite over Parker. Later in the evening May dropped into the Elks' Club bar and began talking again about Parker's chances over Hunt. Dick Shearer took him on for another bet for $100 to $80. Later in the night Mike Conley, having heard that easy money was afloat, came down town on the hunt of some of it. He couldn't locate any. May had gone into camp. Conley said he would like to lay about $500 to $440.

Democratic Money Goes a Begging.

Even the odds of 5 to 4 on the Democrats took a decided slump to-day and the odds offered by Lyons & Co. had not a single taker in the twenty-four hours. The Fusionists were still talking loud, but whenever they were called to time for a material expression of their confidence they invariably weakened until they finally could take no wager at less than 2½ to 1 for their money.

Body Found In Cornfield.

News was received here to-day of the death of the Rev. R. E. Irvine, who was formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at Walnut Hills, in this county. For several years Mr. Irvine had charge of the churches at Clay City and Stanton, in Powell county, and the report received here states that he was found dead in a cornfield near Clay City at 3 o'clock this morning. Dr. Irvine had been missing since Wednesday and his body was found by a searching party which had been at work hunting for him since Thursday noon. His death was due to heart trouble. He was 74 years of age and is survived by his wife and two sons, the Rev. J. Logan Irvine, of Americus, Ga., and Dr. Robert Irvine, a physician of Clay City.

Miss Amelia Naive, who lives at Fort Spring, half way between this city and Versailles, was struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon, her shoulder fractured and an ankle badly sprained. Miss Naive had just alighted from a buggy in front of her home on the Versailles pike when a big touring car whizzed around the corner and ran over her. The car was not stopped to see the result of Miss Naive's injuries, but continued on its way, the occupants being apparently indifferent as to the effect of their recklessness. The identity of the occupants has not yet been discovered.

OUTWIT G. O. P.

Madison Farmers Elect Democratic Delegate.

DEFEAT PLAN TO CAPTURE INSTITUTE VOTE.

RUSH TO MEETING IN AUTOS AND OTHER VEHICLES.

CHOOSE ALL THE OFFICERS.

Richmond, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—A neat little surprise was sprung on the Republicans of the Waco precinct, nine miles of here this morning when more than 150 Democrats arrived there from this city, and elected by an overwhelming majority a Democratic delegate to represent this county at the State meeting of the Farmers' Institute.

The meeting had not been advertised in the Waco locality only. It is said that special men representing the Republican party were in the vicinity for the past week getting the Republicans in line to come to the meeting and vote in a delegate of their party. The voting was fixed for 9 o'clock this morning and the Democrats did not learn what the Republicans were up to until late last night. At 7 o'clock this morning every available automobile and vehicle left here filled with Democrats, who arrived as the meeting was called to order by Commissioner of Agriculture Rankin. The election of officers followed and the Democrats won in each instance by a large vote. The Republicans were so completely outwitted that they simply took a back seat and looked on.

The officers elected were: Treasurer, William Benton; vice president, N. B. Deatherage; secretary, Charles Embry; delegate, the Hon. C. L. Searcy; alternates, Hugh Colyer and William Blanton. Immediately following the vote the meeting was closed.

BRE'R FOX CHASERS.

Lawrenceburg Will Be Host of the National Association.

Lawrenceburg, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The meet of the National Fox Hunters' Association will begin here Monday, November 8, and continue through the week. The Commercial Club, of which John P. McWilliams is president, has the matter in charge. The city will be gaily decorated and a glad hand awaits the 'brer' fox chasers. Six runs have been arranged and the farmers in all parts of the county are insisting that the hunt extend to their farms.

On Monday evening an informal reception will be held at the Red Men's hall and addresses of welcome made. Tuesday evening the association will give a hop in honor of the citizens at the operahouse. Wednesday a reception will be given at the Masonic Temple. Thursday an old-fashioned burgoo will be given and a band will be in attendance, and in the evening a hop will be given. Arrangements have been made to accommodate 500 or more guests.

GASOLINE FUMES BLAZE.

Interior of Newport Residence Destroyed By Fire.

Newport, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The explosion of gasoline fumes to-day set ablaze the home of Councilman W. M. Andrews, Fourth street and Park avenue. Almost the whole interior of the home was destroyed, the loss being estimated at nearly $5,000.

The dining and drawing-rooms, finished in mahogany, with their contents of fine and costly furniture and valuable paintings, were ruined. The upper rooms not gutted by fire were damaged by smoke and water.

Mr. Andrews, who is head of the Andrews Steel and Rolling Mills Company, was at his office and the rest of the family were away from home, the servants being alone when the fire broke out. The servants were cleaning rugs with gasoline and the fumes in some unknown manner caught fire. The residence was formerly the homestead of George Wiedemann, of the Wiedemann Brewing Company, and is valued at $30,000.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Slaughtersville Farmers' Institute and Fair Success.

Slaughtersville, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The Slaughtersville Farmers' Institute, Agricultural Fair and Stock Show closed a three days' meeting today with an average daily attendance of 2,000. The interest manifested by the farmers in this educational movement toward scientific farming and breeding was fully attested by the large attendance at the lectures given by Miss Isabella W. Marshall, dean of domestic science of the State University at Lexington; Senator R. C. Crenshaw, of Hopkinsville, and G. P. Rogers, of Smithland.

It was unanimously decided to make this an annual event for Slaughtersville. The officers for the ensuing year are B. H. Brooks, president; William Henry, vice president; E. T. Winstead, secretary, and Joe D. Crouch, treasurer.

Rabbits Confiscated.

Covington, Ky., Oct. 29.—Game Warden Scales and the police at Latonia to-day took from an accommodation train fifteen sacks, five boxes and several barrels, containing in all over 1,000 rabbits. They were being shipped from various points in Kentucky to Cincinnati. Violation of the game laws is alleged.

Thief Goes Up For Life.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Ed Pendleton, a negro youth, was found guilty to-day of stealing pipes from a local drug store, and was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. The heavy sentence was due to the fact that he had heretofore served two penitentiary sentences.

Change In Bank Presidents.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Henry C. Gant resigned to-day as president of the Bank of Hopkinsville on account of impaired health. The resignation was accepted by the board of directors, and Nat Gaither was elected as his successor, and will assume his duties on November 1.

Last Ten Years.

Paris, Ky., Oct. 29.—After ten years' silence, during which nothing was known of his whereabouts, John O. Wilson, who left Paris to go in business in Oklahoma, wired his brothers, D. T. and J. S. Wilson, Paris commission merchants, that he is in the lumber business in Southern Mississippi. Wilson was given up for dead, strenuous efforts to locate him having failed.

Killed In Runaway.

Mayfield, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Maj. S. Kennedy, of near Clay Switch, met a tragic death this afternoon. He was driving a mule to a buggy when the animal became frightened. The buggy was turned over, and Mr. Kennedy was thrown against a tree. Death was almost instantaneous.

Telephones For C. and O.

Augusta, Ky., October 29.—A force of twenty-five linemen is here, stringing telephone wires from Richmond, Va., to Cincinnati, along the route of the C. and O. railway, and it is the intention to install a telephone in each telegraph office along the line.

the team through the coming season. Miss Frances Willis was elected manager of the team and she has scheduled games with the girls of State University, Georgetown College, and will later arrange games with Campbell-Hagerman, Sayre and Hamilton Colleges.

SPEEDS ON TO NEW ORLEANS

bring about results which cannot but be useful not only to the country at large, but especially those who are locally affected by the stream.

Saving His Figures.

"Now, my friends, I have to make a speech in New Orleans on the subject of the Mississippi River, and if I have not dealt in figures here it is because I am trying to save those mathematical figures that I have for the sordid consideration of men who insist on knowing the facts, instead of a kindly audience like this, who realize the exigency of spreading them clear down the Mississippi River from St. Louis to New Orleans.

"And perhaps I can say one more word. Not of this particular trip from St. Louis to New Orleans, but of the larger trip which I have undertaken from the Atlantic to the Pacific, down the Pacific and back through the Territories and the South to Washington. I undertook that trip in order that I might know more of America and my American fellow-citizens.

"I am ending the trip, and I am glad to end it, by another visit to my friends of the South.

"I have one ambition—perhaps I have others, but this is one, and one that figures largely in my dreams—and that is that when I lay down the staff of office the people of the South may feel that by reason of my administration the bonds between them and the other parts of the country have been drawn closer."

"Uncle Joe" Speaks.

At the conclusion of President Taft's address there were continued calls for "Cannon," "Uncle Joe."

Mr. Cannon spoke of the work accomplished by the first waterways convention at St. Louis in 1873, which led to the deepening of the South Pass in the Mississippi delta on the plans proposed by Capt. James B. Eads, and intimated that, as that great work had come after a trip made by Congressmen and Senators, who went from St. Louis to the Brazos River, then to the mouth of the Mississippi and up to New Orleans, so might this trip from St. Louis to New Orleans result in another great work for inland waterways.

Secretary of War Dickinson made a few remarks, after which the presidential party returned to the fleet and re-embarked at 11:50 o'clock for Baton Rouge.

President Taft extended his automobile ride to Longwood, the ante-bellum and still incomplete mansion of the Nutts, and to the grave of S. S. Prentiss, just beyond Longwood, a distance of one mile from the city. The President was impressed by the arrangements of the court of honor and the commingling of the visitors with the ladies and gentlemen in the gubernatorial boxes.

They are Robert Boles, Samuel Wood, Benjamin Stout and Albert Faulkner....The following is an article from the Paducah News-Democrat on "Inland Waterways:" "The culmination of the campaign for improved waterways will be reached in Washington, D. C., when the National Rivers and Harbors Congress meets December next. President Taft, who will be the central figure at this national convention, has made more extensive plans for a personal inspection of the rivers and canals of the United States than any other Chief Executive in the history of the country. He is not only making a water trip from St. Louis to New Orleans, to be present at the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Waterways Convention, but will be in Norfolk, Va., and deliver an address before the Atlantic Deep Waterways Convention. These two conventions represent particular projects for waterway development and naturally precede the National Rivers and Harbors Convention, which for a number of years has been meeting in the Capital City of the nation. President Taft will have as his associates on a most extensive programme two members of the Cabinet—Secretary Dickinson, of the War Department, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, both of whom, by reason of the portfolios which they hold, are intimately associated with the waterways of the country. In addition to these distinguished citizens, addresses will be made by the German Ambassador, Count J. H. von Bernstorff; Gov. Judson S. Harmon, of Ohio; Gov. Hadley, of Missouri, and editors of leading newspapers representing the several sections of the country. It is also expected that in view of the prominence of this national convention, whose one object is to improve the waterways of the United States, that the Canadian Government will be represented either by Sir Wilfred Laurier, Premier, or Earl Gray, the Governor General, efforts with that end in view being already under way. The object of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress is to educate the people to the importance of the fact that the National Government, having assumed the control and improvement of the rivers and harbors of the country, is unequivocally bound to discharge these obligations promptly and by sound business methods, that the great natural waterways may be made to do their share in the work of transportation. Interest in the forthcoming convention is on the increase, and it is confidently believed in the Capitol that there will be 5,000 delegates in attendance, Secretary Frank Ellison, of the congress, having assurances from governors of States, mayors of cities and officials of commercial bodies that the movement for a broad and comprehensive policy of waterway development is spreading throughout the country, due in large part to the campaign inaugurated by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress."

BOOKS AND THEIR WRITERS.

THE GIANT AND THE STAR.

Book of New Poems By Madison Cawein.

The father-love is the occasion for this collection which breathes in its every verse the poet's adoration for his child, and his wonder at the thought and the question of which the childish mind is so full. Hear the dedication:

TO MY LITTLE SON, PRESTON.

"You, who are four years old;
You, with the eyes of blue;
You, with the age of gold
Young in the heart of you,
Boy with the eyes of blue.

"You, with the face so fair,
Innocent-uttered words,
All the glad sunlight there,
Music of all the birds,
Boy, in your face and words.

"Take you my sheaf of rhymes,
Sung for your childish ear;
Rhymes you have loved, at times
Begged for, and sat to hear,
Lending a loving ear.

"Since you have listened, sweet,
They to some worth attained;
Since in your heart's young beat
They for a while remained,
They to some worth attained."

The poems are told from the child's point of view, and the first, which gives the book its title, begins:

"Here's the tale my father told,
Walking in the park one night—"

They have the true simplicity of childhood, with its many wonderings, its surprises of the everyday things of life and its delving into profundities no man can solve:

"There are some things I call riddles,
No one can explain or tell:
What's the SOUND that comes from fiddles,
Or the NOISE made by a bell?
What is silence? What is thunder?
And why do we laugh and weep?
But the strangest thing—I WONDER
WHERE WE GO WHEN WE GO TO SLEEP?"

And when he has asked many such questions—

"'Now,' my father says, 'you're dealing
With some things too deep for me.
These things, my son, you'd best abandon.
They have muddled men a heap—
Things I'd like to lay MY hand on!—
YOU had better go to sleep.'"

In the epilogue some of the tenderest thought lies, and it concludes a volume remarkable in many ways, not the least of which is the conviction of the many sides to the genius of this true poet, whose circle of appreciative readers widens day by day. Mr. Cawein, in the some eighteen or twenty volumes which have added to his reputation and enriched the world of literature, has never offended the artistic sense by disturbing the unity of his collection of verse. As marked as facial traits are the different groups, and whether he sings of nature and the open, or tells a weird tale, whether he makes love his theme or is overpowered by that melancholy that stirs the soul of the poet, his collections are always homogeneous.

THE GIANT AND THE STAR. Little Annals in Rhyme. By Madison Cawein. Published by Small, Maynard & Co., Boston.

PURPOSE NOVEL BY MR. CHAMBERS.

While the motive of this interesting love affair is good the treatment leaves a question in the reader's mind. The attempt has been made to show the evils of alcohol addiction both inherited and acquired. As usual, Mr. Chambers chooses his setting in the circles of the immensely rich and as usual he paints a vapid life full of trivialities in such a way as to cause no envy among those whose incomes do not drive them to drink, suicide, murder or madness. On the contrary, he makes work the salvation of his characters whose obsession would otherwise lead them to destruction; but the frivolities with which the story is loaded detract from the lesson.

Many side issues engage the reader, but the central figure is a young girl whose ancestors for generations have been destroyed by alcohol. The charming first chapters show the Seagraves, brother and sister, brought up in a seclusion that seems to their grave trustees their only safety. Their father wishes them to be kept in ignorance of most of the evil in life and of their immense wealth and his executors follow instructions to the dot.

In "The Younger Set" the author proved his merit in the portrayal of five children and he has here repeated his success. The innocent Geraldine is discovered to have surreptitiously filled her cologne bottle with syrup from brandy peaches which she sipped after she was put to bed for the night. She has stolen sherry from the kitchen and soaked a lump of sugar for secret regalement. Geraldine had the saving grace to be absolutely truthful, so when accused of these things she admitted them.

Then the sweet young widow, Kathleen Severn, guardian for the children, makes Geraldine understand her danger. All the Seagraves she told her have died of drink. Geraldine is horrified and commences to fight against heredity. Such parts of her story as relate to her backslidings are sermons in themselves. So strong is the craving that Geraldine falls before she knows she is tempted. Then the young artist Duane falls in love with her and she with him. She refuses to marry him with her destiny still in the balance and though when he learns the truth he urges her to marry him and let him fight with her, she refuses on account of the duty she owes the children she hopes to rear.

It will be seen that the theme is treated in quite a modern fashion, one that will perhaps shock many an old-school dame, but which, nevertheless, must make a forcible appeal for care in the eradication of inherited tendencies before the solemn obligations of life are accepted. The other instances of social depravity in the book all point to the same end, though they solve the question by tragedy instead of the successful overcoming of temptation that makes the triumph of Geraldine.

THE DANGER MARK. By Robert W. Chambers, author of "The Fighting Chance," "The Younger Set," "The Firing Line," etc. With illustrations by A. B. Wenzell. Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York and London.

THE YELLOW CIRCLE.

The world never tires of "thrilling mystery stories," hence their abundance, but some authors thresh over well-worked fields until the gleanings are too meager to satisfy even the most lenient reader. The prescription is stereotyped and something familiar marks every line.

Not so here, however. With an apparent determination to interest, to have so much plot and so many incidents that the reader will read in spite of himself this story of the yellow circle begins, continues and ends well. What can be more exciting than a first scene in the vestry room with the bride and her maids gathered waiting for the wedding march, in full regalia, with the most fashionable of audiences breathless for the procession to begin? It seems as if the pair are united, and that the newspapers have already printed their enticing headlines, when into the vestry room there dashes a rough man, who whispers something to the bride, leaves a seeming bracelet in her hand and vanishes.

The beautiful bride turns white, mutters inaudible words, and throwing her satin train over her arm dashes madly after the man. The wedding guests, silenced by a flimsy excuse depart wondering, to gabble and telephone and surmise. The distracted groom and his best man, the wild-eyed maid of honor, who was nearest to the exciting ruffian, wait until the small hours, but the bride returns not. The police are notified and the exciting story is in full blast. To anticipate its solution would be unfair, so the reader who loves a lover and dotes on a twisted mystery must follow the tale for himself.

THE YELLOW CIRCLE. By Charles Edmonds Walk, author of "The Silver Blade," etc. With four illustrations by Will Grefe. Published by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, Ill.

NINETEENTH CENTURY ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Mr. Magnus sails into his vast theme with the zest of a gallant adventurer. He seeks the golden fleece of nineteenth-century literature on a variety of shores, his study including Carlyle, Arnold, Ruskin, Wilde, Chesterton—and Le Gallienne, to mention a few of these many writers of diverse accomplishment.

To bring treasures back from so many ports, famous for such different products, was a task demanding a little more equipment than the author evidently bore to his task. He is alert, enthusiastic, keen after spiritual significances; but on the other hand his historical perspectives are occasionally inadequate.

Once a recognition of this limitation is made, the student has something to gain from the author's ardors for the greatness in Nineteenth-century literature, as manifested in the high-priests thereof—as well as in such acolytes as Patmore, Thompson and a few others significant enough in their degree. Worthy of special note is the author's effort to carry along the assumption that the Nineteenth century marked an emancipation of intellect and spirit, and at the same time to seek eagerly for evidences bearing on the "reconstruction of the foundations of reason and faith and hope, without which no philosophy has equipoise, and no life is worth living."

A notable example of Mr. Magnus' interest in the adjustments between faith and reason are found in his enthusiasm for Meredith, who "as a poet even more than a novelist," belongs among those who strove most valiantly for "the identity of Faith with Reason, the Real as the Basis of the Ideal, society reanimated by love of earth and not shivering with dread of things that are." A typical sentence follows, showing Mr. Magnus' fervor for the spiritual significances, for Meredith's vision and tendency, and showing also Mr. Magnus' fondness for polysyllabic phrases which reflect a youthfulness sometimes stimulating, but sometimes overleaping the bounds of balanced accurate English: "For these ideas Meredith strove in the worst years of the divorce between knowledge and belief, fulfilling the vision of Wordsworth in the new era of democracy, raising to impassioned contemplation the milder curiosity of Tennyson, and surpassing by a deeper transcendentalism the human harmonies of Robert Browning."

One term in this sentence, "deeper transcendentalism," besides forcing the mind to do a somersault, gives a false idea of Mr. Magnus' philosophy of literature. For though he looks constantly to the higher functions of literature, and is concerned with its spiritual qualities, his introductory contention is not for its connections with the deeper transcendentalism. In good old fashion he contends for its values as a vital reproduction of normal life, which of course, takes turns at the "deeper" or shallower transcendentalism yet, in its main tendencies, is surely a different matter.

ENGLISH LITERATURE IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. An Essay in Criticism. By Laurie Magnus. Publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

NEW JACK LONDON STORY.

The story of Martin Eden is one of the best books, if not the best book, Jack London has produced. It is the story of a real human life, as the phrase goes. The author has fastened his attention to his main theme, the evolution of Martin Eden, and the result is consistent and convincing.

Illiterate and uncouth, this Martin Eden has spent his life until his twentieth year, as a seaman. It was a life that took him about the world which he saw, not with the eyes of his rough companions, but with those of a man of intellect, fine spirit, and character. This fine character ultimately gets its chance—when he rescues young Arthur Morse from a quarrel with rough companions who were giving him the worst of it. Upon this incident hinges Martin's introduction to the polite world. Morse invites Eden to dine at his home and there Eden has a first glimpse of a life which until then had existed for him only in imagination.

From that eventful night of the dinner Eden resolves to make this world of beauty and intellect his own. To many of his class the feat had been impossible. But Martin was one of those who achieve the impossible. Powerful in physique, he has a brain to match. With marvelous facility he absorbs books and at once finds himself thrilling with creative energy. With the same force he puts into other things he works at writing. At first his lack of technical power hampers him. Yet later, when he has mastered his art, success is still withheld. But he believes in himself and still struggles, though no one but Brissenden, a genius like himself, believes in him.

The bitterest discouragement is from Ruth Morse, Arthur's sister, who has fallen in love with his strength and character, but who fails him—what he writes terrifies her, she cannot follow him intellectually, nor can her character rise parallel with his. When at last she breaks with him, the incident flashes light on the superficial culture for which she really stands. He is then alone, with a huge mass of rejected writing, his inspiration dead, he is in the Valley of the Shadow. But at last success comes and those who have scorned him now seek him—even Ruth and her family. But his unsophisticated mind revolts at the injustice—in his overstrained mind rings the phrase "work performed;" this work which has made him famous was done when he was despised—yet he is the same man who starved in loneliness before his luck turned.

Mr. London traces with excellent closeness and directness Eden's evolution to the tragic climax, brief and inevitable, which crowns his career. While showing the author in the virile aspect, sometimes too virile, by which he has made his fame, the book shows his gift in another direction—in the tenderness and subtlety with which he has described Eden's sensitiveness to beauty, the fineness of his soul that was so crushed when its ideals were shattered.

MARTIN EDEN. By Jack London. Publishers, the Macmillan Co., New York.

FERNANDO CORTES.

The author of that excellent life of Bartholomew de Las Casas, Francis Augustus MacNutt, has now contributed to the Heroes of the Nations series an admirable life of Fernando Cortes. The author has kept good proportions. Cortes is eminently a hero to him, but he has not condoned the private morals—or lack thereof—or the several acts of duplicity and cruelty which cast blots on the records of the great conqueror. Yet he is not willing to go the lengths of Cortes' contemporary adversaries who ascribed to him almost every known crime from assassination to high treason.

It is interesting to see with what a fine edge, happily this side casuistry, the author cuts in his reading of a character which was as good an example as may be found of one who was neither all good nor all bad, neither completely swayed by his contemporaries, nor at the same time free from quite a little domination by the atmosphere of his times. He was untainted by the cynical paganism of the Italian Renaissance—"had probably never read a line of Machiavelli, nor had he been trained in his school of political ethics, but he was essentially a man of his times." Orthodox and absolute in his beliefs, his conduct was not always in harmony with these beliefs—"but though he failed to live according to the precepts of his religion, nobody can doubt that he would have died in defense of it."

Mr. MacNutt will not permit to go unchallenged, indeed contradicted, the oft-repeated accusation that Cortes aspired to independence of his sovereign. The refutation lies, says his biographer, in the fact that he did not assume the sovereignty and crown in Mexico, where they were his for the taking. He faced dangers and consequences of undertakings that could have courted none but an imperial spirit; but his ambition was restrained by his loyalty, his loyal annalist declares. Bravery, constancy and patience are added to this loyalty as offsets to his occasional opportunism, unscrupulous statecraft, and similar defections from the ethical code of a more exacting generation.

Interesting plates accompany this vivid portrait of this man whom his biographer names "the greatest by far of all the Spaish conquerors who baptized the New World with blood."

FERNANDO CORTES. By Francis A. MacNutt. Publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

MISS SELINA LOU.

With no children of her own and few other family ties, Miss Selina Lou mothered all the children in the neighborhood, ministering to the sick and unfortunate within her reach. What mattered if she was a spinster when she had the romance of the dead Adoniram, lover of her youth, to keep her heart young? So with her constant readiness to lend a helping hand, there was no time for Miss Selina Lou to be lonely, nor to pine for husband or children of her own.

Her establishment consisted of a cow, a grocery which she had acquired through charity for its owner—the money she paid for it enabling him to take his consumptive wife to the West. In her free and easy way she kept the grocery going and meantime managed to run a distinctly unprofessional day-nursery, keeping the little borrowed babies on pillows placed on soap-boxes in the grocery, where her eyes could always keep watch. Moreover, that vigilant eye noted a possible romance between her pet, the beautiful Miss Cynthia, the lovely lady of the Hill Mansion, and the young artist who prevailed on her to let him use for a studio her barn, which commanded such a wonderful view of the river. Of course, Miss Selina took him under her wing as she had done "the soap-boxers," and so eventually the romance between Miss Cynthia and the young artist worked out, with Miss Selina Lou watching jubilantly—for in her words "every woman's heart is soft towards courting whether she is in it or not."

Needless to say Miss Selina Lou is a lovable person to meet in this book which for its tenderness and gentle humor merits much success.

ART IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Sir Walter Armstrong's Art In Great Britain and Ireland will serve as an informing and interesting handbook to his subject. He outlines the story from the primitive art in the British Isles, that of the Iberians and Celts, down to the present day, abundantly illustrating his text with small photographic copies of the monuments, architecture, paintings and sculpture.

The author has no patience with those who hold that the unequally mixed race inhabiting the British Isles is inartistic. It is true, he admits, "that the Celtic and Latin elements in our population deserve the credit of most that is good in our aesthetic production." But after all, he insists, those Celtic and Latin elements are an integral part of our race and we have as much right to take pride in their achievements as in the political virtues which may perhaps spring chiefly from the Teutonic strain in our blood. He is eminently right in his further contention that it is impossible to deny the aesthetic gifts of a people which has left behind it such remains as those of early Christian art in Ireland, as the exquisite churches which stud the whole of Britain from Chichester to Elgin, as the manuscripts of the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries and the needlework of about the same period, as the perpendicular style of Gothic architecture, as the miniature portraits turned out between the days of Hilliard and the days of Conway.

Nor is the author willing to admit that too much credit be given to French influence as a detriment of English Gothic. The fact is, says he, that what we know as Gothic art was the form of expression which grew naturally from the needs, opportunities and aspirations of the races which inhabited Northwestern Europe toward the close of the Middle Ages. Not alone in France then was the style alive, insists the author, otherwise English Gothic would have been the pale shadow of French, instead of having the decided character it possesses.

In similar vein, Sir Walter Armstrong makes his case for the other art under consideration, not hesitating, however, to give honest disapproval when the case demands it.

QUAINT STORIES

By Mignonnette Violett Whelan.

Mrs. Whelan, who has many friends and relatives in Louisville, has here not only done an original thing, but she has done it so well as to be almost beyond criticism. The stories were told to her own little girl and are now being sold for the dear little girls who are unfortunate enough to be held by pain and illness in the Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, where the author now lives.

Mrs. Whelan had her inspiration from a collection of valuable fans of all countries displayed by Tiffany during the holiday season of 1892. After the fans were locked up in a case for the night they became so bored that they decided to while away the long hours by each telling her history. The Spanish fan began and her tale is one of the best. Her sticks are in the form of silver arrows and she has been given to the betrothed of the toreador, Manuello, the hero and the idol of many bull fights, in memory of a scene wherein Pepita had saved his life by hurling her fan into the bull's eye when he had fallen weak and staggering before the charge of the badly wounded and raging animal. When told of it the Queen had her summoned, and in memory of the occasion had a duplicate fan made and presented to the young girl. In Pepita's story and of how the second fan saved the future of the lovers, Mrs. Whelan has shown the story-telling gift in all its perfection. The sustained interest, the ingenuity of conception are remarkable.

All of the stories have a sort of atmosphere, a local color telling of wide travel and experience in the history of many lands. The feather fan, the lace fan, the painted fan, the little cross fan, each has a different tale to tell, but that of the Chinese fan will probably prove the favorite, being not only owned by an empress, but made by one.

"You don't mean to say she did all that beautiful embroidery and carved those ivory sticks?" exclaimed all the other fans in chorus.

So in answer the Chinese fan begins with her ivory part and tells of the exciting life she led as an elephant's tusk and how she was taken into a Chinaman's family and carved by one of his daughters, her sticks representing the constant work of two years. Ah Loo was her name, and her best friend helped her, as being skillful with her needle, she offered to embroider the satin. Cleverly the story of her rise to power and her rank as dowager empress is told, furnishing a bit of Chinese history that is true, but which reads like a fairy tale.

Mrs. Whelan shows such decided gifts as a writer that it is to be hoped many books will follow this one.

ROMANCES FROM FANLAND. By Mignonnette Violett Whelan. Griffith & Rowland Press, Philadelphia.

NEW YORK'S POLITICAL HISTORY.

The third volume of De Alva Stanwood Alexander's Political History of the State of New York is a highly animated narrative. It covers the period between 1861 and 1882—a period indeed that only a dull chronicler could present with dullness.

With especial animation the author presents a phase of the struggle in the early sixties which has not been so much emphasized—the conflicts among the Northerners themselves on the slavery question and the rights of the South in the matter. In lively action are shown Greeley and Bennett, Seymour and Fenton, Richmond, Daniel, Dickinson, John Dix and others, who were at the time making not only the political history of New York, but the history of the whole country.

Passing from these pages that show how the spheres of influence in New York State were involved with those of Washington, in equally vivid fashion the author traces the rise, development and facilis descensus of Tweed. And so on through the Tilden regime, to the campaign of historic memory that ended with the ascent of Grover Cleveland to the gubernatorial chair.

So close to us as the period is, it stands forth from the author's page, gaining additional impressiveness in his almost journalistic, photographic presentations. This excerpt is typical: "Next to Cox sat John Kelly, the new boss of Tammany. The combativeness indicated by the form of the head was accentuated by the conspicuous jaw, the firm, thin-lined mouth, and the closely-cropped hair and beard, already fading into white. He dressed neatly, listened respectfully and spoke in low, gentle tones, an Irish sense of humor frequently illuminating a square, kindly face. * * * Kelly had served two years as Alderman, four years in Congress and six years as Sheriff. * * * Now at the age of fifty-one he was destined to make himself not less powerful or widely known than the great criminal whom he succeeded. * * * Kelly affected extreme modesty, but as he moved about the hall of the national convention, urging the nomination of Greeley, the delegates recognized a master in the art of controlling men."

A POLITICAL HISTORY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK. By De Alva Stanwood Alexander. Publishers, The Macmillan Co., New York.

THE BLACK SHEEP.

This story of small town life might be placed in Kentucky, as the characters, especially those of Gen. Harris and his son, Randall, are typical. It is a good story of the return of the prodigal and of the father who hides his tenderness under a sterness bound to be misinterpreted.

The plot, it will be seen, is no new one, so it is to the manner of telling and to contrasts of characters that the book owes its undoubted interest. Miss Parthy, the village poet, takes an involuntary, but by no means inactive, part in the complications that make poor Randy's way anything but an easy one. Randy has been involved in a scrape in New York, when the real criminal escaping, he is arrested for forging a check. Although this circumstance is cleared up early in the story, the suspicion clings to the boy, of course to be dispersed in the end.

Mixed with the story of love, of attempted crime, the old general stands out a grand character, with his counterpart in the mind of every born Kentuckian. He may not have been named Gen. Harris, but he has been known to all of us as a man of courage, honor, truth, fearless in duty, hiding under remarkable self-control a heart of wax. Although the book has many faults it possesses the saving grace of being interesting and its pictures of life ring true. Its scenes show a sense of the dramatic unmarred by anything maudlin.

FOR YOUNGER READERS.

THE ROAD TO OZ. By L. Frank Baum, author of "The Land of Oz," "Ozma of Oz" and the "Wizard of Oz." Illustrated by The Reilly & Brittan Co., Chicago.

The many lands leading to the Emerald City are carefully colored and bound together in this book so that the Butterfield road is butter colored, a Queer village is violet, the City of Beasts is a grayish white, and so on until one has a book printed of greens and yellows and blues, really all the pretty colors but red and pink, and if the children cannot guess why these are left out the mothers can. Toto is here because the children insisted on having him, and Dorothy, as a matter of course. There are some new people, such as the shaggy man, Polychrome and Button Bright. The author claims to have discovered something most remarkable about the Land of Oz, which he is saving for another story.

BILLY WHISKERS AT THE FAIR. By F. G. Wheeler. Drawings by Arthur De Beblan. The Saalfield Publishing Co., Akron, New York and Chicago.

This tale begins with the arrival of a new automobile, and has a lot of queer happenings in it before the triumphant home coming. Billy is threatened with lockjaw because he took some gummy popcorn and some sticky taffy and glued his jaws together so that he thought he would never again eat sweet grass or fragrant clover. Toppy has a chance here, and while pretending to pick off the sticky popcorn, gives him some vicious dabs to pay up for old scores. The book is as full of merriment as its predecessors that have for so many seasons entertained the admirers of Billy Whiskers and his two-legged friends.

GRIMM'S ANIMAL STORIES. By Wilhelm & Jacob Grimm. Translation by Lucy Crane. Pictures by John Rae. Duffield & Co., publishers, New York City.

These old tales have never been excelled in their line, and the quaintness of their setting will here prove especially attractive.

THE ANIMALS IN THE ARK. From the French of R. Gulzou. By Edgar Mills. Pictures by A. Vimar. Duffield & Co., New York City.

It is hard to decide here between picture and text, both are so good. The story of how the animals managed to pass their time while waiting for the rain to cease and the waters to subside shows an imagination that will prove entertaining to young readers.

WHEN ROGGIE AND REGGIE WERE FIVE. By Gertrude Smith, author of the "Roggie and Reggie Stories," "Little Ned Nappy and Flora," "Little Precious," etc. Illustrated by Henrietta Adams. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

Roggie and Reggie go to Washington with their father, who is a Senator, and think they ought to be little Senators. Not wishing to be thought babies any longer, they run away from their nurse, Anna Maria, meet a pretty young lady with her dog, make friends with her and take breakfast with her papa, who proves to be no less a personage than President Roosevelt himself. This is only the first chapter of a funny, nice book.

THE BOY PIONEERS, SONS OF DANIEL BOONE. By D. C. Beard, author of "The Field and Forest Handy Book," "The Jack of All Trades," "The Outdoor Handy Book," etc. Illustrated by the author. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City.

The author is the originator of the Society of the Sons of Daniel Boone, which numbers more than twenty thousand members, each wearing the proper insignia of his rank in the society. Thus, the president's totem sign is a powder-horn, the vice president's a tomahawk, the treasurer's a flint arrowhead. These emblems are cut from dark green, red or brown cloth or felt. Boys wrote so many letters that the founder of the society could not answer them, so he wrote this book, telling all about the society and what it stands for. And a good thing it is. Aside from telling how a boy can become a member of the S. D. B., it gives plain instructions how to build a pushmobile, how to rig a housewagon, make a clubhouse, a fort and many other things, such as the making of wirekens with thatched lipkins, a swimming hole, a pioneer water-swing; how to talk the real American sign language as it was used in Boone's time, how to throw a tomahawk, how to handle a gun, with a list of gun "don'ts"; all about the winter sports, running the Indian scouts, catching the raccoon, running the gauntlet, gander pulling, snowshoe making, skating wings—in short, everything that Boone, his men and the Indians of his day made, liked or practiced. The principal duty obligatory on the S. D. Bs. is to save the forests from destruction, consequently this society is indorsed by former President Roosevelt, Admiral Dewey, Maj. Gen. Bell, chief of staff, U. S. A.; John Muir, and other great American citizens.

The histories of such men as Boone, Johnny Appleseed, Simon Kenton, Simon Girty, Audubon, David Crockett, and Kit Carson should be known by every boy in the country, certainly by every Kentucky boy, and the celebration of their anniversaries by the S. D. Bs. will perpetuate the memory of their courage and pluck. It is hard to imagine any real living boy not wanting to join this society, and the work tells how, and a hundred other things.

UME SAN IN JAPAN. By Etta Blaisdell McDonald and Julia Dalrymole, authors of "Manuel in Mexico," "Raphael In Italy," "Kathleen In Ireland," etc. Illustrated. Published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

A story of Japanese life in the household, following dear little Ume San through the seasons and celebrations of her country. Little Miss Plum Blossom was born on the 20th day of the second month, the day the little plum tree blossomed, hence her name of Ume San. It bloomed for nine years after exactly on the same day, but on the tenth, the day before her eleventh birthday, there seemed not the slightest chance of the hard little buds opening. The little girl said a prayer to Benten Sama before she went bed. "Grant that one little spray of the plum blossoms may open to-morrow." Ume found the buds closed when she awoke in the morning and became naughty. How she shirked her duty to spite the goddess for not answering her prayer is beautifully told, and after all the sun shines and before night the plum tree is in bloom.

MANUEL IN MEXICO. By Etta Blaisdell McDonald and Julia Dalrymple, authors of "Ume San In Japan," etc. Published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Another of the series, "Little People Everywhere," giving the child's life in the land of sun and flowers, of fine scenery and varied climate, picturing his life on the hacienda, his visits to Mexico City, with his friend Benito, where the two have many curious experiences and adventures, finally becoming pages to a great lady and taking part in some fine functions. The story is carefully accurate in all its scenes and descriptions, giving both young and old readers a capital impression of the life and customs of the Mexican people.

ON VARIOUS TOPICS.

THE GRIZZLY BEAR. By W. H. Wright. Publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

In an autobiographical introduction Mr. Wright qualifies as an expert on his subject. From his boyhood he was possessed with a love of hunting. When he was 7 he was taken to a circus, on his return from which he declared his resolution, in customary fashion, of becoming a hunter "when I grow up." But, he continues, "the strange thing is that I have never changed my mind." Though it was not till forty years later that he actually began his life as a hunter with gun and camera of the grizzly. From that time his adventures with the "monarch of American beats, the grandest animal our country knows," extend over a period of twenty-five years. During this time with untiring energy, keen observation, as hunter and scientist, he has tracked the grizzly through all his haunts in our Western country, from Mexico through the Sierras and Rockies, to the Barren Grounds. And the record of this faithful study is an entertaining as well as an interesting study.

THE ROMANCE OF THE ISTHMUS. By Hugh Weir. Publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Mr. Hugh Weir disregards the industrial, financial and mechanical side of the building of the Panama Canal. He is frankly concerned with what he names the romance of the isthmus, the story of the khaki heroes whose arms and brains have fought a great fight down there with disease, heat and virulent insects. It is a marvelous story, this—of how these men, 40,000 strong, have worked and sometimes played down there, while they have been accomplishing the biggest record in the engineering history of the world—a notable feature in this accomplishment being the shoveling out of 2,000,000 cubic yards a month of dirt from mountain and jungle. Young and old must thrill at the sound of some of the chapter headings of this "romance"—A Day with Panama Alligators, Khaki Heroes, Jungle and City, Scorpions and Tarantulas. What are the dragons of old compared with these fine contemporary terrors extirpated by Uncle Sam's valiant army of peace and civilization? Statistics seem a dry contribution to a subject so rich in general interesting aspects, yet Mr. Weir has inserted some in his story that lend it additional impressiveness. For instance, last August, with the excellent sanitary regulations, the death rate was only 8½ per cent. to the 1,000—less than one-half of the deaths during that month in New York. Mr. Weir writes in an engaging style, the vividness of which is supplemented by good photographs.

SUMMING IT UP. By Henry Lewis Hubbard. Publishers, J. S. Ogilvie Co., New York.

The present author harks back to Noah and discovers at that early period an element of greed that has persisted down the ages, manifesting itself here to-day in America in an effort to let capitalism run riot, while "lodgeism and churchism" divide the people, and socialism tends further to produce chaos. Yet for all this pessimistic view, the author perceives an awakening to spiritual values, which will if rightly recognized and fostered lead to health and happiness in the body politic. The author goes a long way round to prove his theory, but considering the distance he covers he has contrived to be pretty logical and lucid.

JOSHUA JAMES. By Sumner I. Kimball. Publishers, The American Unitarian Association, Boston.

An interesting contribution to the "True American Types" series. Joshua James was one of the best-known lifesavers in the world. Others have perhaps wrought more heroic achievements, or more marvelous ones, but his sixty years of rescue work gave him, it has been said, a longer term of service and a more diversified experience in battling with the sea than any of his contemporaries. The present brief biography is a stimulating account of his courage, his industry, his fidelity and modest simplicity during the years of his service in the Massachusetts Humane Society and later in the United States Life-Saving Service.

THE THIRD REPORT OF THE WELCOME RESEARCH LABORATORIES AT THE GORDON MEMORIAL COLLEGE, KHARTOUM. Publishers, Baillere, Tindal & Cox, London.

This is an exhaustive account of the investigations of sanitarians, bacteriologists, chemists, anthropologists, ethnologists and students of tropical medicine in the region of Khartoum. It deals with matters important to scientists in all parts of the world. The relation of the rat to plague infection is discussed, and the sleeping sickness and other diseases common to the Upper Nile and the Central African jungle and swamps are taken up both as to diagnosis, treatment and probable origin. An interesting chapter is devoted to the medical practices and superstitions of the Kordofan, and numerous plates gives pictures of the various charms used by the blacks to ward off diseases which their imagination traces to the evil influence of spirits and demons. Another chapter is a report upon the Nilotic and Negroid tribes by a distinguished anthropologist, David Waterson, lecturer upon anatomy in the University of Edinburgh. This chapter is profusely illustrated.

REDISCOVERY OF WESLEY'S JOURNAL A ROMANCE OF LITERATURE.

Tireless Work of a Methodist Clergyman Solves the Cipher Used By the Founder of the Denomination and Throws a New Light On the Life and Spiritual Growth of the Religious Reformer—His Love Affair In Georgia and His Relations With the Government and Inhabitants of the Colony Now Laid Bare—An Early Abolitionist.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Rayleigh in Essex is a tender, inarticulate English village that doesn't quite reach around the hill on which it is situated. The main road approaches the summit with a temerity due, perhaps, to the forbidding aspect of the church which stands there. It is near this church that the Rev. Nehemiah Curnock, the Methodist historian, lives and works.

Under the editorship of Mr. Curnock a new edition of John Wesley's classic "Journals" is to be published in the immediate future. This new edition has been necessitated by Mr. Curnock's discovery of material which has been lost to the world for more than a hundred years. The newly-discovered passages with an enlarged introduction will swell the "Journal" to six volumes, containing 3,000 pages, or one-third more than so far has been published.

I called on Mr. Curnock this week at his charming home in Rayleigh and had a long talk with him with reference to his important find which he says "throws an entirely new light on part of Wesley's life which has hitherto been in obscurity. We are now able to trace more fully the growth of Wesley's character and the way in which he was gradually prepared for the work which has made history."

The first volume to be published will give new material about Wesley's life at Oxford and at Savannah, Ga. When he went to Georgia as a missionary to the Indians he got into close association with Gen. Oglethorpe, founder of the colony. Wesley's brother Charles was at that time secretary for Colonial affairs; on account of ill health he was unable to fulfill his duties and his work was assumed by John Wesley. This brought the latter into contact with the politics and social life of the colony.

The policy adopted by the Georgia trustees prohibiting traffic in rum and negro slaves was heartily supported by Wesley. It may be said that during John Wesley's time there were no negro slaves in Georgia. This stand of Wesley's aroused the animosity of the planters, an animosity which eventually drove him back to England.

The story of Wesley's love affair in Savannah when he was an unmarried man of 30, is already known, but the world will now have material to form a correct judgment regarding the couple.

"It may be said that this part shows something to his discredit," Mr. Curnock remarked, "in the sense that like other impressionable men of 30 he acted unwisely. The girl with whom he fell in love was evidently very charming, and made a strong impression on Wesley, under the influence of which he acted in a way which he himself condemns. At one time he contemplated marriage, but his vows to the Indian mission deterred him. Suddenly Miss Sophia Christiana Hopkey, for that was the lady's name, married William Williamson. Later, Mrs. Williamson, who was a communicant of the English church, broke the canonical rules at the risk of being expelled. Wesley warned her. On the repetition of her offense she was expelled by him and a great trial ensued of charges brought against Wesley by Williamson.

"All the legal and human aspects of this trial and the underlying causes of the animosity of the planters are now made clear by these valuable documents.

"It is interesting to note that the first hymnbook used in England was published by John Wesley in Charlestown. Many of these hymns were translated and versified from the German, French and Spanish, nevertheless there are some original hymns composed by Wesley."

Seven years ago Mr. Curnock took 4,000 photographs of the diaries and Wesley letters, the originals of which could not be bought. Having gathered this material he was confronted by the difficulty that they were written in the three following scripts: (1) A system of shorthand invented by John Byrom, which is now obsolete though not entirely dissimilar to the Pitman method; (2) An abbreviated longhand, a word being represented by a single letter or two letters; (3) A most extraordinary disabled. Many other untoward incidents and accidents have marred the pleasure of the voyage. If, however, it has been lacking in the impressive unison that was planned by its promoters it has demonstrated, as the President remarked in his Vicksburg speech, the need of improvement of the Mississippi River.

The trip has had its annoying features, to the distinguished excursionists and to the hospitable residents of the cities visited, and has furnished some amusement for those who were neither entertainers nor entertained. Nevertheless it has not failed of its object. The President and the statesmen have seen the river and they have noted the unanimous desire for its betterment. Regardless of slow boats and sandbars they will all get to New Orleans in time to attend the Deep Waterways Convention. In the felicity of the Crescent City's welcome they will quickly forget any disappointments or discomforts of the voyage from St. Louis and will be in a receptive mood for the facts and figures which will be presented for their consideration by the earnest and capable advocates of the fourteen-foot channel.

One Point Overlooked.

Senator Newlands, of Nevada, has written a letter to the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, in which he expresses a doubt as to whether a ship subsidy law would increase foreign carrying facilities.

In his epistle concerning the robbers, Mr. Newlands has this to say:

"If we should devise a system of carrying our manufactuerd goods free to foreign countries we could not compete with foreign manufacturers."

Mr. Newlands takes the position that the effect of the tariff system in this country is so to raise the cost of production as to make competition between American and foreign goods impossible. Inasmuch as American manufactured articles are sold cheaper abroad where there is competition than at home where competition is excluded for the benefit of the manufacturer, Mr. Newlands' position upon this point is not unassailable.

But there is one important fact that Mr. Newlands overlooks. That is, that the system of graft advocated by the managers of the Republican party, as at present constituted, is elastic. If we should inaugurate a system of ship subsidies we should, in all probability, find ourselves within reasonable time in possession of a merchant marine of respectable tonnage, if not of respectable parentage. Should the first subsidy grab prove insufficient, it could be raised, and it would be raised, to a point at which the shipowners could enjoy a comfortable margin. The principle of "reasonable profit" as applied to the problem of allowing the infant industries to exist as parasites upon the ultimate consumer, would be applied to the problem of subsidizing a new set of rich corporations.

The shipowners might not make much out of hauling freight up and down and to and fro upon the world's ocean highways, but they would see to it that the subsidy should prove profitable. The Washington lobby would have Congress to raise the limit and make the game worth while. The shipowners would be taken care of. Once launched on a basis of the skinning of the millions for the fattening of the millionaires, our merchant marine would never be left in the lurch by Congress. It would never be allowed to perish for a want of pap. National pride would be appealed to in plausible arguments for an increase in the subvention.

We should have a merchant marine if we should open the treasury to the grafters. We should have a ship trust that would send the stars and stripes to ripple upon the breeze in the ports of all countries. But the United States would find itself in the position of the King of Siam who, according to history as written by makers of musical comedy, received a white elephant from the King of Cambodia, and found that the demands of the animal's appetite were taxing to the exchequer;

"For the elephant ate all night, and the elephant ate all day."

The unprotected producer of wealth in this country, under the Payne law, is the man with the elephant on his hands. The enactment of a ship subsidy law would merely cause him to feed another insatiable pachyderm.

Coddling the Criminal.

No cause is so bad that it lacks special pleaders in its behalf. Hair-splitting amateurs of the study of criminology are constantly making sentimental arguments in the interest of the downtrodden individual whose violent impulses, lack of early training, or failure, for one reason or another, to recognize his responsibilities, cause him to commit a crime. It is often asserted that there should be less harshness toward the individual who transgresses the law. Convicted criminals rarely fail to find persons who are willing to petition executives or parole boards for clemency. But inasmuch as it is practically impossible to convict the innocent and impossible to discipline the guilty by any means so effective as allowing them to serve their sentences, such sentimentalism is an error of judgment.

A case in point is that of William Short, who shot his chorus-girl wife in Washington. The man had been sentenced to the penitentiary twice. For his first crime he was "sent up" for five years in Sing Sing. The sentence was suspended. He was next sentenced to serve nine years in Sing Sing and was paroled.

Of course all sin is error and all crime proceeds from a lack of the nice mental balance that prevents well-ordered persons from committing acts of violence or dishonesty. But the only manner in which society can deal practically, and effectively, with criminals is to put them in prison that they may no longer run at large and override the rights of unoffending persons. If there is one psychological characteristic common to all criminals it is that all of them develop contempt for the law in proportion to its failure to punish them. The man who buys a jury and secures his acquittal, the man whose friends obtain for him a pardon or parole, and the man who escapes through a technicality or the failure of the prosecutor to produce sufficient proof of his guilt, are alike in that they have gained by experience the knowledge that crime does not always bring its own punishment. They are alike in that each is more likely to yield to temptation to break the law than is the man who has never yielded to such temptation and gone free.

This is not recognized by the class of persons who send flowers to wife-murderers and who readily sign petitions to Governors to secure pardons for criminals who have exhausted the possibilities of defense and appeal and at last found themselves convicted. The loopholes of escape through the courts are so many that when a man is sentenced to the penitentiary there is no great probability that he does not deserve to go there, and persons who are requested to sue for pardons or paroles should accept the advice of Davy Crockett before lending their influence to the project.

Rockefeller Versus the Lazy Bug.

It is corking of John D. Rockefeller to shell out $1,000,000 to provide a war fund for the scientists who wish to inaugurate a campaign against the lazy bug, whose scientific name is hard to spell, and to remember that it is not worth while for anyone but men of science, who love multisyllabic words for their own sake, to use it.

Mr. Rockefeller's heart is evidently in the hookworm war. He abhors indolence in all of its forms as nature abhors vacuum, the difference being that while nature's abhorrence of vacuum is dispassionate Mr. Rockefeller's hatred of indolence is quite the reverse. When the great financier sees a man neglecting an opportunity to chase a dollar down some avenue of human endeavor in which he is not chasing that dollar and its sisters and its cousins and its aunts, the great man is filled with seething rage. That anyone should neglect to hustle and to harvest the reward of his hustling is to Mr. Rockefeller at once incomprehensible and reprehensible. It is, moreover, depressing to his spirits. It kindles his wrath!

What is more natural than that Mr. Rockefeller should hate the lazy bug? Had the microbe of inertia, the bacillus of rest, the specific micro-organism of goodfornothingness, penetrated the Rockefeller cuticle in the old Ledger A days, and bored for the Rockefellerian vitals, that then potentially rich man might now have been a fisherman, a poet, a philosopher, a man of no account, a wearer of shiny clothes, a borrower, a pensioner upon the bounty of his un-bug-bitten fellow man! The mere contemplation of what might have been is sufficient to fill the Rockefellerian mind with horror!

But let us, for a moment, consider what might have developed in an earlier period of his career as an oil magnate had science revealed to the rising young man, and future "Uncle" of his country, that there was a lazy bug! In those days Mr. Rockefeller was a part of the human ferment, struggling upward. He was the incarnation of the principle of self-preservation; the living illustration of the immutable, if sometimes somewhat uncomfortable, law of the survival of the fittest and the fightiest! He was little given to philanthropic meditation. It is said that he was hostile to his own stomach because it was a consumer of valuable commodities and not a producer of earned increment, and that he cruelly neglected that centrally located and highly valuable organ, to the detriment of his health. Quite naturally, a man who cherishes animosity against his own stomach because its occupation is not gainful, has no place in any corner of his soul for mercy toward the competitor! Had John D. Rockefeller, in the first flush of his young manhood; in the initial stages of his mania for collecting and covering into his own coffers all of the cash in the world; in the heyday of his strength and energy, discovered the existence of the hookworm he would have cornered the supply and hired a corps of bacteriologists secretly to infect the small competitor.

At the thought of what might have been done with the hookworm as his ally; of what amounts that were needlessly spent in exterminating the opposition in the oil business, the Rockefellerian spirit must be troubled! Visions of wealth wasted in socking it to the enemy must rise before the mind's eye of the great man and mock him cruelly. Let the scientists who are students of psychology, as well as bacteriology and other ologies, consider the question of whether Mr. Rockefeller—as great as is his dislike for indolence, and as great as his admiration for the individual who is up and doing with a heart for any fate—does not want to wallop the lazy bug as much because that insect did not reveal itself to him when he might have employed it to save his cash and the wear and tear upon his nervous system incident to the unavoidable necessity of laying the small competitor by the heels and sending him to the industrial morgue, as well as because it prevents the young men of the "rising generation" from rising without the aid of an alarm clock?

That there is perhaps a double purpose in Mr. Rockefeller's rich gift to science—one of revenge and one of altruism—does not, of course, affect the value of the gift. Should the million bestowed by him upon the lazy bug hunters result in the extermination of the microbe it would be of incalculable benefit to the infected sections. The wheels of industry would whir; would buzz, where there is now silence and shiftlessness, poverty, pessimism, discontent! The musical profanity of the plow boy would echo—would "rebound with a joyful sound"—from hill and cliff, now brooding over untilled valleys. Automobiles, plug hats and champagne and sirloin steaks would circulate freely in districts where the hickory shirt is now worn six days in the week, and where blue jeans, linsey-woolsey and cottonade now drape the nether limbs of an indigent populace!

Should this vision be fulfilled, Mr. Rockefeller would, of course, be knighted and decorated by a king or an emperor or so, as well as cannonized by science.

With suitable, and sincere, apologies to a poet whose fame is small, and whose name escapes memory:

"And when this does eventuate, and they choose his shield and crest.
Perhaps they'll like this blazon, which we venture to suggest.
the motto: 'Swat 'Em Doc;'
Gules, the man-who-scooped-the-jackpot, with a million in a sock. "

It will be a great day for all of us—and more especially for some of us, when the hook worm lies a bleeding corpse at our feet, and there stretches out before us a colorful and alluring vista, in which striving will be as refreshing as a sparkling draught, and in which achievement will be as easy as getting money in a letter.

Great will be the name of John D. Rockefeller; negligible the billions he corralled; sublime the mission to which an all-wise Providence appointed him!

A County Seat Fight.

Boyd county is in the throes of a county seat fight. A vote is to be taken next Tuesday on a proposition to move the courthouse from Catlettsburg to Ashland. Speakers are in the field, for and against removal, and the newspapers of the two cities are filled with campaign arguments for their respective sides.

Ashland is about twice as large as Catlettsburg, and claims to pay three-fourths of the county taxes. Being the larger town her residents think they ought to have the courthouse. Catlettsburg claims to be nearer the center of Boyd county. Her citizens contributed land and money for the county buildings in the first place and probably feel that possession is nine points of the law, or ought to be. They assert that the present courthouse can be repaired and put in good condition for $10,000, while it would cost a large amount of money to construct a new building in Ashland. Some good arguments are being put up on both sides of the question and there seems to be no danger that the voters of Boyd county will lack information when they go to the polls next Tuesday to settle the controversy.

A good many issues may arise that will superinduce a hot campaign, but no question has ever yet been sprung that will stir up as large an amount of caloric in a given time as a proposition for county seat removal. It may be expected that Boyd county will come to the front on Tuesday with a record-breaking vote. Whatever the result may be when the returns are counted it is to be hoped that it will leave no room for doubt. A decisive majority either way probably will put an end to the agitation of the matter for all time to come. Ashland has flourished without a courthouse and will continue to flourish, whatever the outcome of the election may be. Catlettsburg is a city of such proportions that she should be able to worry along without a courthouse should she be defeated in the contest. It is not to the advantage of either city or of the county that the courthouse should be a bone of contention.

Presumably the statement in a New York paper that its candidate for Mayor will win by $20,000, as the Boston Herald believes, is a typographical error. Had the statement been "by $200,000" or "$2,000,000, it might have been regarded as a tactical error.

The yellowest of the yellow journals is growing tame. It was not a "penny dreadful," but a ten-cent magazine that published the "white slave" story which has stirred New York as only a jolly good wallow in sensationalism can stir it.

A Hong Kong correspondent says: "From here Charles W. Fairbanks will go up to India." Of course, the direction is not perpendicular. Were it so Mr. Fairbanks would be there and in Hong Kong simultaneously.

Prohibitionists in a Texas town that voted "wet" have taken out all of the licenses allowed by law, in order to prevent saloons from running. Apparently Texas prohibitionists greatly prefer blind tiger whisky.

TWO THOUSAND CHEER FOR HEAD

Addresses Big Meeting At Fifteenth and Bank.

A. Scott Bullitt and Others Also Speak.

Enthusiasm of Democrats At High Pitch.

FEEL CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

Two thousand cheering and enthusiastic admirers of William O. Head, Democratic nominee for Mayor, heard him speak at Fifteenth and Bank streets last night. The speaking was from a wagon in the open air and no larger outdoor meeting has been held during the campaign. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Fortieth Precinct of the Eleventh Ward Democratic Club. The people began to gather as early as 7 o'clock and were greeted by a hugh bonfire and thundering reports of giant firecrackers. By 8 o'clock the large plot of ground at the intersection of Rowan, Bank and Fifteenth streets was filled with persons yelling for Head and the Democratic ticket.

The first speaker of the evening was A. Scott Bullitt, candidate for County Attorney. Mr. Bullitt had not proceeded far with his speech before a giant firecracker was exploded which shook things up a little. Like a flash Mr. Bullitt exclaimed:

"That is simply nothing to the bomb that W. O. Head will put under the city hall next Tuesday."

This assertion brought forth tremendous applause from the 2,000 people who were in attendance. The next interruption to Mr. Bullitt's speech was the appearance of W. O. Head on the scene. It was a minute or two before Mr. Bullitt was able to proceed with his speech. He told his hearers that no man could speak when W. O. Head was around until he had first spoken. He said he was the people's leader and they had a right to hear him, and he wanted them to hear him. He declared that Mr. Head had made the strongest and greatest personal campaign of any man since party lines were drawn in Louisville. He said that he had made the most virile speeches of any candidate for Mayor for a generation. The mere mention of the name of Head brought forth deafening shouts from the crowd.

Cheers For Mr. Head.

When Mr. Head arose to speak he was greeted with a regular cyclone of applause. The hurrahs could be heard several blocks away. The shouts were re-echoed by persons far away from the meeting. After the cheering had subsided sufficiently for the speaker to proceed he said that he always felt at home addressing Democrats and persons of the Eleventh ward. He said he was greatly pleased at seeing so many women in the audience. This expression brought loud cheers from the women with cries that they hoped that he would be the next Mayor. In the course of his speech Mr. Head said:

"Election days do not come often and I want you to take a day off this time and see that the Democrats get a square deal. It is not a matter of Head in the campaign, but a great principle is involved, and I expect you to settle it next Tuesday. If Grinstead and his gang are put into office for four years more it will seal the fate of this great city for twenty years to come. It is already getting to be a negro haven. I, as one, am willing to take care of a reasonable number of negroes of the good element, but no more. The campaign is drawing to a close and my work will soon be done and on Tuesday you will be the jury in this case."

"I believe the people are tired of the gang that is now in the city hall. On the sixteenth of next month the new Mayor will take his seat and I believe you are looking at him."

This last expression was received with the greatest of applause by the audience and amid the shouts one man with a loud voice cried:

"What about Foster?"

"Well," replied Mr. Head, "Foster will not be quite so gay when I get in the Mayor's chair."

Vociferous Shouts.

This was sufficient for another round of vociferous shouts. Mr. Head said that he believed all officers should treat the people right and he said if he were Mayor officials under him would have to do as much. The speaker touched on the great things that were started and accomplished by the Democrats for the city. He cited the building of many of the public utilities. He said, though, that the Grinstead and Republican gang were claiming the credit for everything.

At the close of his speech Mr. Head said that if elected he would do the best he could to be true to the trust and whether in victory or defeat he would remember the good people of the city who stood loyally by him in this campaign.

The speaker was urged to speak longer, but he said that he had been speaking so much in the open air that he would have to cut his talk short. He was applauded from the time he quit until he left the platform and started away. Mr. Head declared as he was leaving the meeting that he never addressed a more enthusiastic crowd. Austin Walsh followed Mr. Head in a keen and cutting speech against the present administration. The last speech was made by Samuel L. Robertson, candidate for representative from the Fifty-first Legislative district.

ENTHUSIASM MOUNTS HIGH.

Six Precincts Hold Meetings In the County.

The county precincts turned out big crowds last night for the last country rally before the election. Six precincts held meetings, and Democratic enthusiasm mounted high. Many speakers put their final touches upon campaign efforts, and in all parts of the county confidence in final Democratic victory at the polls was frequently expressed.

The Masonic Hall at Middletown was crowded when Judge R. Frank Peak, Luther C. Owings and Wallace A. McKay arrived to spread the doctrine of loyalty to the whole Democratic ticket. The speakers addressed themselves to the issues of the campaign as they apply to the county. The voters were urged to support the county ticket as a whole, and warnings of the danger of scratching were spoken by the propounders of Democratic doctrines.

Frank Moore presided over the big meeting that gathered in the Masonic building at Orell. Muir Weissinger spoke with particular reference to his own race for County Judge; and was seconded by Thomas Walsh and Samuel Tate. That the western part of the county is strong for the ticket was plain to be seen in the applause that greeted the remarks of the orators for the occasion. On every side prophecies were heard.

The Fairmount rally was held under excellent auspices at Roy Simms' place. Judge Thomas R. Gordon spoke in favor of the candidates for the bench. The difference noted between Democratic and Republican administrations was called to the attention of the voters, and applause greeted his efforts. Eugene R. Attkisson also spoke upon the issues in general. The meeting was a typical country success.

The West Louisville precinct, which is just outside the city limits, was the scene of a big and enthusiastic gathering at the county schoolhouse No. 63, Ray Mann, E. S. Dorsey, R. L. Page and other speakers stirred their hearers with good Democratic doctrine.

Democrats in the Spring Garden precinct turned out almost to a man for the grand closing rally of the campaign. The crowd paid the numerous speakers the high compliment of close attention and heavy applause. Samuel W. Greene, H. D. Robb, Ernest Neuman, William H. Field and John H. Chandler were among the speakers present.

Capt. W. H. Able presided over another big rally at Hikes Point, at Cassello's place. The Hikes Pointers were most enthusiastic, and listened with eagerness to Joseph M. Huffaker, Herman D. Newcomb and Al M. Emler.

MORE THAN 200 PRESENT.

Enthusiasm Runs High For Entire Democratic Ticket.

Fully 200 men gathered in Flaherty's Hall, at Eighteenth and Hill streets, last night in answer to a call for a meeting of the Marydale and Flora Heights Democratic Club. A. Sikking, Sr., a Democrat of fifty-five years' active service, presided over the meeting and introduced the following speakers: R. C. Elder, John R. Pflanz, Clem W. Huggins and Joseph M. Lee.

The speeches of Mr. Pflanz and Mr. Elder were practically along the same lines, both following out the defense of the whole ticket against the attacks as made by the Republican press. They declared the ticket the strongest ever presented in the city and county and expect it to poll one of the largest votes on record. Confidence was expressed that the county ticket would "come to town" with a nice majority, and that the vote of the city would materially improve it.

Mr. Huggins pointed out the necessity for vigilance at the polls, saying that as the election was already won for the Democratic ticket except the counting of the votes, it was unnecessary for him to go into detail as to the value of the ticket, but it is necessary for every Democratic voter to remember the importance of casting his vote early and lending what assistance he could to seeing that it is properly counted.

Mr. Lee riddled the claims of the Republicans that Mr. Head is the enemy of organized labor, claiming that a personal canvass among the union men that he knows has shown him that they are very nearly solid for W. O. Head and the entire ticket.

This meeting was marked for the enthusiasm shown, and the confidence expressed as to the outcome of the election.

WILL WATCH AT POLLS.

Centennial Democratic Club Members To Be On Guard.

The Centennial Democratic Club held an open air meeting at Goss avenue and Hickory streets last night, presided over by Joseph Haerling, and addressed by Harry W. Robinson, Hal Williams and C. W. Milliken.

The campaign having been remarkable for the enthusiasm that has been shown in all the meetings it is reasonably assured that the voters will attend to the voting in the proper way, but the speakers all asked for the closest sort of observance of the work of the opposition at the polls. The feeling of all in attendance was one confident of the election of the whole ticket, and their willingness to do their part of the work on election day was gratifying to the candidates present.

The mention of the name of Mr. Head was the cause of lusty cheers from the crowd.

POLICE COURT SEEMS TO HAVE REVERSED ITSELF.

Kileys Fined In Case Similar To One In Which Judge McGee Condemned Police.

This is a little story of the police in politics. Last Saturday night John Kiley, Denny Kiley and George Gernlein stopped at Fourth and Market street for a few minutes while a meeting in the interest of Mayor Grinstead was going on. A crowd of negroes yelled for Grinstead. Denny Kiley, a Democrat, yelled for Head and a policeman pounced on him and took him to the police station. His brother, John Kiley, and George Gernlein accompanied him down the street. Three or four other policemen, two of them Sergeants, also followed along. Since Mr. Kiley was a Democrat, all the policemen wanted a chance to claim the distinction of making the arrest.

When Denny Kiley was taken to the police station, John Kiley went out to get a bondsman. He returned prepared to give bond and as soon as he entered the police station he was pounced upon by a policeman, roughly dragged into the office and slated before his name was ascertained.

It was John Kiley the police were after in the first place. He happened to be a Democratic election officer. They thought they had a Democratic election officer when they arrested Denny Kiley. Being a Democratic election officer is the only offense any citizen must commit to be arrested. Neither of the Kiley's had ever been arrested before. They had done nothing for which to be arrested Saturday night, so John Kiley asked permission to sit in the office until he could get a bondsman.

Instead he was jammed into a cell with three other men and compelled to stay there until his bondsman came.

When his case came up in Police Court yesterday morning the police swore that the Kiley's used profane language. The Kileys denied this and they were corroborated by George Gernlein, a deputy constable, who was with them. The Police Judge took the word of the partisan Republican police and fined the Kileys. The Kileys are not through with the case, they say.

MADAME MARCELLA SEMBRICH should leave the concert stage, as she has retired from the operatic field. She would retire in the flood-tide of fame and triumphant popularity. It would seem to those so fortunate as to hear the delightful concert given at the Masonic yesterday afternoon that the supreme living exemplar of coloratura singing has anticipated the psychological moment. That "the singer's art is evanescent," as Madame Sembrich remarked in an interview yesterday, makes it the more regrettable that a glorious organ and a finished art should be withdrawn from an unsatiated public. But if the famous contratrice errs she does so generously. Blessed be the artist who leaves us an ideal to cherish and the remembrance of an uncommercialized career to respect.

The singer was welcomed by an assemblage which in size, brilliance and enthusiasm represented Louisville worthily. None of the great artists is more popular here than Sembrich, who has come to us during many opera and festival seasons since the early glorious days of the old Auditorium. She was greeted warmly at each appearance upon the stage yesterday afternoon and responded with characteristic generosity to insistent and insatiate recalls. An honest chronicler must also record for the benefit of a joke-loving public that she was inadvertently interrupted at the penultimate climax of the iridescent Ernani "Aria," the close of which furnished forth—not coldly—the apparent encore. The florid air served admirably to display the flexibility and compass of the world-famed soprano voice, and especially the remarkable power and brilliance of its upper register.

The second group of Mme. Sembrich's songs represented characteristically, if not chronologically, a newer era. This included Schubert's lovely and too little sung, "Forelle," the "Nussbaum" and "Fruhlingsnacht" of Schumann and "The Lass With the Delicate Air," by Dr. Arne, the latter being practically Sembrich's property at this time. The "Spring Night" was impeccably lovely, marking a climactic moment of sympathy and inspiration.

Four modern songs constituted the third group, of which the "Pasturale" by Bizet and "There Sits a Bird" by Arthur Foote, are worthy of favorable mention. The presence here of a composition by the assisting pianist, Frank La Forge, centered the chief interest in that number. "To a Messenger" is a graceful and charming song, well able to stand on its own merits. Mme. Sembrich was urgently invited, and incited, to repeat it, and did so, and honors were jointly shared.

The Strauss waltz "Voce di Primavera" and the encores "Niemand Hat's Gesehen" and "Coming Through the Rye" were favorites with the audience, who finally secured an additional self-accompanied closing number from the obliging singer.

Frank Rogers made his initial appearance in the well-known barytone "Aria" from Massenet's "Herodiade." The splendid music was sung with a crescendo of spirit and confidence and its reception proved Mr. Rogers' prompt establishment as persona gratis in Louisville. His later numbers, "Du Bist Wie Eine Blume" in the familiar Rubinstein setting, the "Clown's Serenade," and Scott's stirring "Border Ballad" set by Cowen to a glorious march, afforded the singer opportunity for the display of versatile dramatic expression as well as of a fine and excellently trained voice. The acceptable innovation of announcing the encores made the audience aware that the two unlisted numbers were "The Plague of Love," by Dr. Arne, and a setting by Edward German of Kipling's "Rio."

Mr. La Forge deserves a chapter for himself. He has achieved a far-reaching fame as the prince of accompanists, a talented composer and a fine pianist. Nothing but praise and delight have attended his appearances in Louisville, but there is too little of him in company with such artists as he accompanies. A solo recital, one feels sure, would place him where he belongs in the thoughts of his Louisville admirers—among the ranks of the comprehensive interpreters of piano literature.

LADIES OF THE MACCABEES HOLDS ANNUAL INITIATION.

Banquet At The Seelbach Attended By the Delegates.

With a class numbering 120 women the annual initiation of the Ladies of Maccabees was held yesterday afternoon on the roof garden of The Seelbach. Seven Louisville hives took part in the degree work. Miss Bina M. West, of Michigan, supreme record keeper, and Miss Helen T. Burt, commander of the States of West Virginia and Kentucky, were in charge of the ceremonies. The auditorium was artistically decorated in red, white and black flags and bunting. A Maccabee drill was one of the features of the meeting, which had to do with the inner workings of the order.

The Lady Maccabees of the World at The Seelbach last night gave a banquet and reception to Miss Bina M. West, supereme record keeper, of Port Huron, Mich. There were seven hives represented: Kentucky Valentine Hive, Mrs. Armstrong, commander; Louisville Hive, Mrs. Katherine P. Kane, commander; Delmont Hive, Mrs. Letterman, commander; Alpha Hive, Mrs. Keefer, commander; Bluegrass Hive Dr. Sarah Fagley, commander; Oakdale Hive, Mrs. Barker, commander.

There are 2,500 Lady Maccabees in Kentucky, 1,000 of whom belong to the Louisville Hives. A large membership is looked for during the coming winter.

Miss West, the supreme record keeper, holds a most important office. In her office she has sixty clerks. She presides over the board of trustees, who look after the investments. She said the trustees had invested $100,000 this year in Government bonds.

They have over a million dollars in the emergency fund. Miss West said: "We believe in order to meet the obligations in the fraternal order that the rates should be based on a standard mortuary table and to further that end we have adopted the N. F. C. mortality table.

The banquet began at 9 o'clock and the ladies, headed by Miss West, filed into the dining-room and were seated to an excellent seven-course dinner, after which a flashlight picture was taken.

An informal dance followed the banquet.

The bride was born in Jefferson county, Ky., and will be 19 years old next March. She is a daughter of Samuel Boes. They were accompanied by Everett Smith, who made the required affidavit.

RICH FARMER

Dies At His Home In Utica Township.

GEORGE WILEY SWARTZ WAS LAST OF TWELVE CHILDREN.

DEMOCRATS IN JEFFERSONVILLE CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

DOUBLE FUNERAL TO-DAY.

George Wiley Swartz, the last of twelve sons and daughters born to George Swartz and Nancy Fry and a widely known farmer of Utica township, Clark county, Ind., died at his home four miles east of Jeffersonville early yesterday morning after a long illness from a complication of ailments that had made him an invalid for several years. His death was not unexpected, as the summons had been looked for since Sunday. He showed an unusual amount of vitality for one of his years and on several occasions it was thought he was at death's door. He came from a leading pioneer family of Southern Indiana and his father, who was a Methodist minister, was born near where the son died, on January 13, 1803. He died on August 11, 1890, at the advanced age of 87 years.

Besides being the last of his father's large family, Mr. Swartz was the oldest member of Clark Lodge, No. 40, Free and Accepted Masons, of Jeffersonville, both in age and point of membership. He had belonged to the order for nearly fifty years, it said. He was also a member of Tabor Lodge, No. 92, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Swartz was born in Utica township on December 26, 1827, and remained on a farm with his parents until he was 16 years of age. He then came to Jeffersonville to make his own way and entered the dry goods store of Simon Bottorff and John Bottorff, remaining with the firm for ten years. He then engaged in business for himself until in 1863, when he retired on account of his health.

Was Twice Married.

He then purchased the farm on which he died. In the fall of 1877 his home was destroyed by fire and the following year he built a more palatial residence. In 1853 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Butler, who died in 1861, leaving him a family of four children. In 1862 he married a second time, his wife's maiden name being Maria Lentz. Four children were born of this union. The death of Mrs. Swartz was on July 8, 1902. Mr. Swartz is survived by two daughters by his first marriage, Mrs. J. R. Bottorff, of Chicago, and Mrs. Theodore Tuttle, of Elwood, Ind., and by the second marriage by one daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Holman, and two sons, Charles Swartz and Will Swartz, the latter being a resident of Jeffersonville. Mrs. Holman and Charles Swartz live on their father's farm.

Mr. Swartz had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since boyhood and in his political belief he was a Democrat. For four years he was trustee of Utica township, serving from 1880 to 1884. Although a party worker, he did not aspire to official honors and his service as trustee sufficed. His time, as long as his health permitted, was devoted to his fine farm, which is one of nearly 200 acres, and his inclinations were toward a quiet, peaceful life.

The funeral will be conducted from the family residence Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock by the Rev. J. M. Larmore, pastor of the Utica Methodist Episcopal circuit, and the burial will be at New Chapel. Clark Lodge, No. 40, Free and Accepted Masons, of Jeffersonville, and Tabor Lodge, No. 92, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, also of Jeffersonville, will participate in the services.

Democrats Confident.

With the battle practically won the Democrats of Jeffersonville are saying howdy, howdy, to each other in their joy. Last night the campaign had reached a point where it seemed there was nothing to it but James E. Burke for Mayor and Ernest Rauth for City Clerk, with more than a fighting chance for all of the candidates for Councilmen-at-Large and Councilmen. Never were the Democrats of Jeffersonville so confident of victory as now, and they expect to win hands down, in the face of the large amount of money the Republicans have secured through assessing every man who would come up.

The feeling of victory for the Democrats has reached Louisville and a well-known business man of that city, who visits Jeffersonville to sell his wares every few days and is known as an uncompromising Republican, yesterday said he had some money to place on James E. Burke at odds of two to one. He visits nearly every part of Jeffersonville once or twice a week and has formed his conclusions from what he has seen. He made the offer to wager his money on Mr. Burke in the presence of two Democrats he was talking with yesterday just after noon.

The fact that the Democrats failed to walk into the trap set for them by the Republicans on the moneyless campaign proposition has made the opponents of Mr. Burke sore, and that is their main cry at the tail end of the campaign. The fight against the American Car and Foundry Company, the largest industry in Jeffersonville, and other corporations was hushed yesterday and the fire was centered on the fact that the Democrats had failed to fall into the trap.

It has become apparent that the post-office fight is cutting more of a figure in the effort to elect W. L. Samuels Mayor than a desire to see him occupy the chair. It is figured that if Albert L. Anderson, chairman of the Republican city central committee, pilots the party to victory on next Tuesday his chances for receiving the appointment of postmaster have gone up several points. If he fails as chairman his political strength will depreciate accordingly; at least, this is the way it is being sized up.

Funeral This Morning.

One set of pallbearers will officiate at the double funeral services of Mrs. Sue R. Watts and her daughter, Mrs. Sue R. Willey, from the family residence, 312 Pearl street, Jeffersonville, this morning at 10 o'clock, and those who will act as an escort for both bodies are Frank R. Willey, Charles N. Wilson, Lawrence Zimmer, James Scott, F. M. Rose, Thomas Jacobs and Prof. C. M. Marble, all of Jeffersonville, and Herman Becker, of Louisville. The services will be simple and in keeping with the noble lives led by the mother and daughter. The Rev. John S. Ward will conduct the last rites.

Benjamin C. Watts, the only absent member of the grief-stricken family, arrived last night, he having just left Denver when his mother and sister passed away. He had been notified of the precarious condition of his mother, but it was not until yesterday morning that he learned she was dead, and that affliction's hand had dealt a double blow in taking away his sister also. The news was broken to him at St. Louis yesterday morning by his brother, Robert B. Watts, who made the journey to the city for the purpose.

It was feared Mr. Watts might collapse when the news was broken to him suddenly after his arrival in Jeffersonville, as it had been found impossible to locate him by wire, and on Thursday night Robert B. Watts left for St. Louis to meet his brother and perform the unpleasant task of telling him the loved ones were dead. Mr. Watts withstood the shock manfully and with his brother boarded a train at St. Louis yesterday morning to complete the remainder of the journey to his old home. Last night there was a sad meeting of all the surviving members of the family at the home where they had mingled for years, and this morning the little circle will mourn in unison at the biers of their mother and sister. Following the services at the house the bodies will be taken to Cave Hill cemetery, Louisville, to be consigned to their final resting place.

Names Off Remonstrance.

The remonstrance against the sale of liquor in Utica township, Clark county, Ind., which became operative on November 1, 1907, expires next Monday, and yesterday a petition was filed in the office of Peter Nachand, Auditor of Clark county, in Jeffersonville, by thirty-six persons, asking that their names be removed from the remonstrance. Those who petitioned are as follows: James Edward Colvin, Charles Broy, Oscar Haskell, George Brendell, George Brunner, John Tatum, Mat Colvin, James Dorsey, Ralph Tatum, William E. Colvin, David V. Ross, Nicholas Lentz, Frank Harrison, J. W. Colvin, John Dunn, Frank Broy, C. Rile, John Raines, William Brendell, Ora Canter, Thomas Colvin, John Worthington, William Hooper, N. W. Lentz, Arthur Van Pelt, Louis Deark, Henan Dorman, R. R. Wood, Henry Dairk, R. T. Taylor, Jerry Lewis, John Wagner, Reuben Hooper, R. A. Holman, Tom Wesley and Sherman Morrow.

The fact that the petition had been filed was not learned until some time after the action had been taken, and caused surprise, as it was the belief of those opposed to the sale of liquor in the township that no steps against continuing the remonstrance would be taken. Steps were begun at once to counteract the petition. Just exactly what the filing of the petition will amount to is not clear.

—Edward E. Hanlin filed suit yesterday in the Clark Circuit Court against Walter A. Beach and Edward S. Pernett for the collection of a note of $125 that was executed on July 24, 1909, and made payable to Albert H. Matthews, who transferred it to the plaintiff. Judgment is asked for $300.

—Notice was received yesterday by Curtis W. Ballard, Circuit Clerk, from Geo. F. Edenherter, superintendent of the Central Hospital for the Insane, that John Bernickel and Jerome O. Noles had been released on furlough from the institution as improved. Both were sent from this county.

—The defendants yesterday in the foreclosure proceeding of Richard Wallace Harding against George W. Carter and wife yesterday appeared into court $2,000, and offered to confess judgment for $51.12 and $2.56 additional for attorneys' fees, it being claimed the latter amounts are all that is now owed.

—Albert M. Powers, who is 27 years old and lives at New Market, and Miss Leonora R. Clapp, who became 16 years of age last June and is a daughter of George Clapp, of Nabb, were married yesterday by Magistrate Benjamin J. Ferguson at the courthouse. The father of the bride accompanied the pair.

—A finding was rendered yesterday by Judge Harry C. Montgomery in the Circuit Court in the divorce action of Elmer Conway against Emma Conway, which was heard several days ago, and a decree was granted. They lived together for more than twenty-five years before the separation took place.

Dietz and Edward L. Dietz to set aside deeds made by Isaac M. Perry, which, after a hearing of five days, was decided by a jury in as many minutes for the defendants.

—A sealed verdict was returned yesterday morning by the jury trying the action of Thomas W. Stout against Eliza Stout, his former wife, for the collection of $1,984, which was for the defendant on the complaint and for the plaintiff against a setoff of the defendant, which means Stout gets nothing. Neither does he have to pay the defendant anything.

—Susan Renu and others filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday against the Ohio Valley The Company and others for the collection of $44 and damages on account of it being alleged the defendants cut forty-four trees on 120 acres of land owned by the plaintiffs in Carr township without consent or legal right. Each tree, according to the complaint, was worth $15, a total of $660, and judgment is demanded for $800.

—Suit for divorce was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth Weir against Oscar Weir, the ground being cruel treatment and failure to provide. They were married in this city by Magistrate Charles S. Ferguson on November 20, 1906, and separated October 20, 1908. At the time the plaintiff, who was Miss Elizabeth Smith, was a telephone operator at Jonnyville and the defendant was manager of the exchange at Sellersburg.

—The ejectment and damage proceeding of Ellen Coombs against Hallie Richards was up again in the Circuit Court yesterday, and an order striking the case from the docket was set aside. REAL ESTATE ASSOCIATION PLANS ITS BANQUET.

Within the next two or three weeks local realty men, affiliated with the Louisville Real Estate Association, will be active making preparations for the big December banquet given by the organization to its members each year. It was announced yesterday that the board of directors of the association will meet probably next week or a little later and appoint a sub-committee to complete all the preliminary details. It has already been decided to hold the banquet December 13.

According to several men in the association prominent in its affairs and local realty circles, the event this year will be a most notable one. They say that they are already planning to have every member of the association at the festal board and many specially invited guests. The committee, assisted by Secretary W. H. Newhall, will make a special effort to get up an elaborate programme of speakers.

The negro resisted arrest and in the struggle bit Officer White severely on the hand. Some of the stolen property was recovered.

Hocker was charged with stealing from a common carrier and resisting officers. His case was continued in the Police Court.

In Coming Municipal Election In New Albany.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR MAYOR IS CONFIDENT.

MISS JENNIE SMITH SUCCUMBS TO BLOOD POISON.

NAME ELECTION INSPECTORS.

More interest was shown in the municipal election in New Albany yesterday than at any time during the campaign. The friends of Mr. Greene, the Democratic nominee, became more aggressive and last night bets were offered that the Democrats would win by several hundred majority. Mr. Greene has been making a personal canvass and says he has no doubt of the result. He says he is receiving assurances of support from leading Republicans who want a change in the management of municipal affairs and a reduction of the tax rate. Mr. Greene and his associates on the ticket have given their pledge that if elected the expenses of the city government will be reduced $8,000 on salaries alone, and this is having the effect of drawing to the support of Democratic nominees many who would not ordinarily support the ticket.

At the last meeting of the Common Council Mr. Jackson wanted to make the tax rate $1.15 on the $100 valuation, but his motion was voted down. Mr. Jackson is the Democratic leader in the Council. He says the city can get along very well on a rate of $1.15 on the $100 valuation, and will insist upon this rate in case his party is successful on Tuesday next.

At the election Tuesday next the saloons will be closed. The returns of the election will be brought to the city hall by the inspectors immediately following the election.

Death of Miss Smith.

Miss Jennie Smith, 73 years old, died at her home on the Grant Line road near New Albany, yesterday morning. Miss Smith's death resulted from blood poisoning. Some time ago she sustained an injury to her toe, and gangrene developed. In order to save her life her leg was amputated. She improved for a time, but suffered a relapse a few days ago and never rallied.

Miss Smith came of a pioneer family of Floyd county. She is survived by two brothers, Charles and William Smith, of New Albany township, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Aekin, of DeLand, Fla. She was a devout member of the Central Christian church.

Special Council Meeting.

The Common Council of New Albany held a special meeting last night for the purpose of appointing three election inspectors in the place of those who could not serve on account of absence from the city or other duties on election day. The ones who could not serve are: Stephen Day, Ninth precinct; Frank Bonifer, Fifteenth precinct, and Henry Kreutzer, Twenty-third precinct. Those appointed to take their places are: Adolph Day, Albert Bence and Charles Haller.

The Council will meet again in regular session on Monday night.

Nineteen clubs were admitted this year in the federation, the total number being 121.

—The old Dowerman residence at Second and Shipping streets, in the West Albany suburb, owned by Postmaster R. W. Morris, was destroyed by fire, occasioned from a defective flue, yesterday morning. ATTEMPT MADE TO FLY AEROPLANE DURING WIND.

Army Lieutenants Come Near To Grief—Prevented From Making Turn With Machine.

College Park, Oct. 29.—Continuous wind to-day made impossible any extended practice with the Wright aeroplane. Six miles an hour was the maximum breeze in which practice work had been carried on under the tutelage of Wilbur Wright, but there was no time when the wind did not exceed that rate.

In the morning when the lieutenants were quite hopeless of obtaining a calm, they made an attempt to fly in a nine-mile wind. They had hardly started on their way down the track when the strong wind lifted the aeroplane, which went forward at a high rate of speed. When the lower end of the field was reached the lieutenants concluded that caution was the better part of valor and did not attempt to make a turn in the face of the wind. They landed successfully and the airship was taken back to its shed.

FAKE TACTICS

Employed by "Reformers" to Deceive Union Labor.

EXPOSED BY PAINTERS AND DECORATORS LAST NIGHT.

SPRAYING MACHINE USED IN PAINTING THEATER WALLS.

NO BLAME FOR MANAGEMENT.

The fake tactics of the local Republican organs to swing the union labor vote into the "reform" Republican camp at the polls next Tuesday were exposed and held up to public ridicule at a meeting of Local No. 118, Painters and Decorators' Union, at Germania Hall last night, where thirty-eight of seventy-five laboring men signed a statement denouncing as untrue an article recently published to the effect that nonunion negro workmen were employed to decorate the interior of the Buckingham Theater last year. It was in every sense an indignation meeting.

Spraying Machine Used.

The statement bearing upon the publication of the report, containing the brief announcement that nonunion negro labor was employed to decorate the interior of the Buckingham Theater in 1908, declares that subsequent to the filing of this report an investigation by the painters' union revealed the fact that a spraying machine was used in covering the walls of the house. This means that the union has no grievance against the proprietors of the theater, for machine painting is beyond the jurisdiction of the organization. In other words, the painting was not done by hand, and therefore the men who did the work were not required to be members of a union.

It was explained by a member of the painters' union, following a meeting last evening, that immediately after it was discovered that a spraying machine was used, the report of Business Agent Stoepler was supplanted by another report to the effect that there was no cause for complaint. However, this initial, or original report, remained in the files and received no attention from anyone until it appeared in the columns of the "reform" press. The photographic reproduction of the report roused the members of the union into action, and they now declare that the disappearance of that paper from the official files will be traced.

Text of Statement.

The statement, bearing the signatures of the thirty-eight union men of high standing among those of their craft, follows:

"To the Public: In a recent issue of a Republican organ appeared a photographic reproduction of a report made by me to Local No. 118, Painters and Decorators' Union, during the month of May, 1908.

"Now that all the facts may be made known, I wish to state that I made such a report to my organization, but after careful investigation by myself and other members of my organization at that time, it was found that the work was done by a spraying machine, which does not come under the jurisdiction of our craft.

"When these facts were laid before the organization, it was unanimously voted that no blame be placed upon the proprietors of the Buckingham Theater. I am sorry that the painters' union has been dragged before the public in this way, but I feel that I am in duty bound to defend myself and the union by giving the public this statement of the exact truth.

"F. A. STOEPLER, Business Agent.

"We, the following members of Local No. 118, Painters and Decorators' Union, vouch for the truth of the above statement:

POLICE TAKE OFFENSE AT CHEERS FOR HEAD

RUSH CROWD ON BANK STREET AND MAKE ARRESTS.

CAN'T STAND FOR ANYTHING SAVE GRINSTEAD SHOUTS.

START AFTER LODGE MEN.

Judging by the actions of the police of the Fourth district last night, the hysteria which attacked the police of the Sixth district under Capt. Wickham, at the Grinstead meeting at Third avenue and Avery street earlier in the week, has become epidemic among the city's preservers of the peace.

There were two Republican political meetings "down on the avenue"—Portland avenue—last night, one at Nineteenth and Portland and the other just off the thoroughfare at Twenty-third and Bank streets. One was holding forth at Nineteenth street making a vain endeavor to win converts in a territory that neither needed nor wanted to be converted. As a result, then, whenever the speaker—name unknown—uttered what he and his bodyguard calculated to be a Burning Thought the crowd of boys and scoffers yelled right lustily "'Rah for Head!"

As usual, of late, several policemen who might have been patroling beats were out imbibing the alleged oratory, and, as might be expected, they were disturbed by the shouts and were provoked to the degree of threatening arrests if the boys persisted in venting their enthusiasm. Their ukase failed to reach the ears of some members of the Ptakawa lodge of Red Men, who were in session on the third floor of Nelligan's Hall, and when one of the Burning Thoughts was wafted up to the lodgemen, some of them who were standing before an open window shouted "Rah for Head!"

According to an authentic statement, four or five of the patrolmen rushed up to the lower door of the hallway leading to the lodgeroom and tried to force their way up to the lodgeroom.

Over on Bank street the policemen arrested Michael Hoban and Augustus Cook, who were charged with disorderly conduct—the technical charge, in these strenuous days, for the crime of shouting in rich, full-chested tones "Hurrah for Head!"

Both men were paroled by Capt. Foster. They will appear before Judge McGee in Police Court this morning.

FOREMAN INJURED BY BOILER EXPLOSION.

Lake Butler, Fla., Oct. 29.—The boiler in the Robert's cotton gin at Guilford, five miles north of here, blew up at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, demolishing the gin and hurling the body of W. J. Joiner, the foreman, a distance of sixty yards, literally scalding the flesh from his body. Physicians were rushed to the scene from here, but there is very little hope for Joiner's recovery.

ONE FAVORITE WINS VICTORY

Good-Sized Killing Made At Latonia On Filly Ethel D.

TOM HAYWARD IN FEATURE.

Fire Breaks Out In Clubhouse and Locomotive Jumps the Track Near Stand.

FINE DAY FOR LONG SHOTS.

SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.

FIRST RACE—Lottie Darr, Eva Tanguay, Eleanor Robson.
SECOND RACE—Silver Stocking, Hyperion II., E. M. Fry.
THIRD RACE—Belle Clem, Short Order, Handzaretta.
FOURTH RACE—All Red, Pinkola, Woolwinder.
FIFTH RACE—Gold Treasure, Roseburg II., Night Mist.
SIXTH RACE—Stonestreet, Crepps Beckham, Vanen.
BEST BET—Stonestreet.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—This was a day of excitement, and while the sport was marked with spectacular finishes, but one lone favorite repaid its backers by catching the judges' eyes first. The bowling over of the public choices commenced early in the day, Ethel D. starting the ball rolling by annexing the opening dash at long odds. Outsiders galloped home in front in every event with the exception of the second, which went to Dr. Waldo Briggs, which had been backed into favoritism by means of the big commissions sent into the ring by Barney Schreiber, who arrived at the track in time to see his colt win.

The victory of Ethel D. in the first was a costly one to the layers, inasmuch as the Donnelly filly was backed for a killing of good-sized dimensions by those in on the know. It was probably the most successfully engineered betting coup of the fall season at the Milldale course. The public generally had misconstrued the winner with Ethel W., a filly which has been performing indifferently hereabouts, and the close resemblance in names was responsible for the lack of interest in the Donnelly trick's chances and caused the layers to take liberties in the laying of odds.

Tom Hayward came into his own by winning the feature event in record time after a sensational stretch battle with Right Easy. The latter looked like a sure winner entering the final furlong, but Tom Hayward, under clever handling by little Brannon, just did nod her out after a remarkably brilliant stretch run. The time, 1:25 4-5, is but two-fifths of a second short of the best previous track time, and considering the dead condition of the course was probably the most brilliant effort, from a standpoint of time, so far performed this fall hereabouts. Descomnets, around whose chances as good as 20 to 1 went begging, won the closing event and brought to an end a day of surprises.

Shortly after the final race had been run fire broke out in the club[illegible] excitement existed until the [illegible] gotten under control. A defect[illegible] was given as the cause of the fire, [illegible] did $500 damage.

While the fire raged in the racetrack enclosure a yard engine jumped the track immediately in front of the track, delaying the fast flier from Louisville for some time.

Gene Elrod, manager of the local betting ring, who has been appointed to a like position during the coming winter meeting at Juarez, Mex., received a telegram from Matt Winn to-day stating that he, in company with Lyman Davis, would be at this track during the forepart of next week while en route to Empire City.

Ethel D. a Good Thing.

Ethel D. was the good thing slipped over the pan in the opening event. The Donnelly filly was almost entirely overlooked by the talent, who apparently got her mixed with Ethel W., a youngster which has been race daround here unsuccessfully of late. Those in on the know, however, were down "hook, line and sinker," and with as good as 6 to 1 going begging they are credited with having cleaned up a neat sum on the race. It was only a gallop for the winner, which went to the front with the release of the barrier, opened up a big lead and never afterward in danger. Fleuron's Daughter was the nearest in pursuit throughout and had no trouble in saving the place money. Ferrand Cecilian, coming with a terrific rush through the stretch, just did get up in time to show. Locust Bud was installed the favorite, but as usual finished outside the money.

Favorite Takes the Second.

Dr. Waldo Briggs, the favorite in the second event, repaid his backers by annexing the winner's portion of the purse in handy fashion. The Reif nag, from a slow beginning, gradually improved his position going to the first turn, responded gamely when called upon, easily outfooting Bruce Rice in the final drive. The latter had to overcome a world of early interference and would have been closer up with better racing luck. Tom Holland was a fast-going third. Joe Moser showed his usual high turn of speed for the first five-eighths, but quit badly in the stretch. Soprano, well up during the early stages, stopped badly after going a half mile.

Many Colors In a Gallop.

The third was only a gallop for Many Colors. The Nicoll trick had all the foot of her party and, racing into a commanding lead in the early stages, made every post thereafter a winning one. Anne McGee ruled the favorite in the gambiorium. She was well up for the first seven-eighths, but quit all over when the real pinch same. Dexterine, outrun to the head of the stretch, closed up a big gap in the final quarter, and was going strongest at the finish. Plume, but for sharp interference in the back stretch, would have been closer up. An accident marred the running of this event. Rupicola, with little R. Goose in the pilothouse, was caught in the jam which followed the rounding of the clubhouse turn, and went down. Neither horse or rider, fortunately, received any injury.

Calash Is Defeated.

A word of interference caused the defeat of the public choice, Calash, in the fourth. The Johnson youngster was pounds the best of the field stacked up against him, but was in such close quarters throughout as to cost him the winner's a portion of the purse. He closed like a jack-knife in the last sixteenth and was running over the leader at the end. Duquesne, clear of all interference, easily dropped into command when Cantsel quit. My Henry was nosed out of third money by My Gal after a mild brush in the final sixteenth.

Tom Hayward Scores Again.

The fifth and feature event of the afternoon resulted in a blanket finish between Tom Hayward and Right Easy, while the even-money favorite, T. M. Green, dropped into third place without much effort. The time was remarkably fast, being within two-fifths of a second of the track record. Right Easy led her until right into the final sixteenth and looked like a sure winner. Tom Hayward, under a strenuous ride from little Brannon, caught the leader tiring and just did nose her out. T. M. Green found the early pace too stiff and chucked the issue after going a half-mile. The balance of the field was outclassed.

Another Long Shot Wins.

The biggest surprise of the afternoon came with the running of the closing race, the winner turning up in Descomnets, a 20 to 1 shot. Beau Brummel, from the barn of John Marklein, ruled the favorite with the formplayers, but as usual failed to run up to expectations, finishing away back in the rut. The winner assumed command when Tony Faust quit and gamely stood a hard drive to stall off Alice Baird at the end. The latter, outrun in the early stages, closed a big gap in the final furlong and was running over the others at the end. Denver Girl had no trouble dropping into third pocket.

Ethel D. ran as if she outclassed the others; was away fast and, sprinting into a long lead, won as her rider pleased. Fleuron's Daughter made a game effort and was going strongly at the end. Ferrand Cecilian came from a long way back in the stretch run and was going strongest at the end. Judith Page suffered interference and put up a good performance. Crenel had a rough trip. Uneeda was in close quarters during the last quarter. Locust Bud had no mishaps and ran poorly.

Dr. Waldo Briggs, running in his best form, moved up steadily from a slow beginning, and, wearing down Joe Moser after rounding stretch, won with plenty in reserve. Bruce Rice had to overcome interference and finished going gamely. Tom Holland, poorly handled, was allowed to go wide entire trip. Joe Moser tired fast after going a half. Grande Dame ran fairly well, and will show improvement. Sister Phyllis, weakly handled, was going stoutly at end. Winner entered for $900; no bid. Scratched: Billy Bodemer, Little Fitz, Fundamental, Greysteel, Sainister. Overweight: Soprano, 1; Sister Phyllis.

Many Colors, away fast and showing the most speed, held sway for entire trip and won well in hand. Dexterine came from a long way back the last three furlongs and finished with a rush. Plume suffered interference in the last sixteenth and was going gamely at the end. Anne McGee, away poorly, could never get into the lead and tired in the last sixteenth. Kyronda made a good bid after going a half, but quit in the stretch. Rupicola fell soon after start. Scratched: Nettie Traver.

Duquesne was in a pocket to the stretch turn, where he came fast and won with plenty in reserve. Calash had a rough trip and after being shut off sharply at the half was forced to go wide; finished fast and was probably best. My Gal, from a slow beginning, closed up a big gap in the stretch and got third place in the last stride. My Henry tired in the last sixteenth. Delf suffered interference. Cantsel showed early speed, but quit almost to a walk in the last furlong. Overweights: Duquesne, 3 pounds; Autumn Rose, 5; Samaria, 4; Cantsel, 3, and Delf, 1. Scratched: Capt. Glore.

Tom Hayward, running in his best form, moved up steadily in the first half and, finishing with a rush in the last furlong, got up in the last stride. Right Easy, showing the most early speed, maintained a fast pace, but found the distance a trifle far and tired in the last few strides. T. M. Green quit badly after going a half and barely lasted for third place. Pocotaligo was going strongly at the end and would have been third in a few more strides.

Descomnets, well handled, moved into contention soon after the start and, lasting well after assuming the lead, won out after a well-sustained stretch drive. Alice Baird, poorly handled, had to overcome interference, finished gamely and was best. Denver Girl, shuffled back in the first half, closed up a big gap the last quarter. Beau Brummel also suffered by interference and was forced wide. J. C. Core tired after going three-quarters. Dainty Dame quit badly the last three furlongs. Tony Faust retired after going a half. Scratched: Irrigator, Hughes, Meadowgrass, Mrs. McCormick, Eldorado, Alma Boy. Overweight: Landlord, 3.

KLING KNOWS NOTHING OF REPORTED DEAL.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 29.—"I'm not in on the deal," said John Kling, the former catcher of the Chicago National Leage baseball club, when asked to-day regarding the report that Manager McGraw, of the New York Nationals, had arranged to trade Pitcher George Wiltse and give $7,500 in addition to the Chicago club for him.

Continuing, Kling said: "McGraw has not mentioned the matter to me. I hardly think President Murphy would want to trade me to his old rivals."

CHICAGO AND MINNESOTA MEET ON GRIDIRON TO-DAY.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 29.—What promises to be one of the most spectacular, as well as one of the most important gridiron contests in the West this year, will be played on Northrop Field to-morrow afternoon between the University of Chicago and the University of Minnesota. The game will eliminate one of the foremost contenders for the conference championship.

The Chicago players arrived here this morning. At Nicollet Park they went through their final signal practice. This evening the rival teams sat down together at the third annual "purity ba[illegible]et" at the Roosevelt Club rooms.

In spite of the apparently gloo[illegible] attitude of Coach Stagg, Chicago is [illegible] 10 to 8 favorite.

The coaches were unwilling to-night to definitely announce their lineups. Sunderland and Crawley, of Chicago, both went through the signal practice, and it is thought they will play, though Young may start at right end in place of Sunderland. Pickering, the injured Minnesota fullback, may begin the game, but there is talk of switching Stevens to that position and putting Deveau in at right half.

AUTOMOBILE TOURISTS ARE WELL ENTERTAINED.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Oct. 29.—The New York Herald-Atlanta Journal good roads automobile party, en route from New York to Atlanta, made a fine run from Roanoke to Winston-Salem to-day, a distance of 125 miles. The checking car left Roanoke at 6 a. m., stopped one hour at Martinsville for lunch and arrived here at 3:45. The roads were found in splendid condition. At Martinsville the citizens turned out en masste and gave the visitors an enthusiastic welcome. Ty Cobb, as usual, was the star attraction all along the route.

Great throngs of citizens greeted the visitors upon their arrival here and much eagerness was manifested to see the famous baseball player. To-night a reception and smoker was tendered the highway autoists at the Hotel Zinzendorf. By request Ty Cobb made a short talk on baseball. Other members of the party also spoke.

The party leaves to-morrow morning for Charlotte, where they will spend Sunday. The noon stop will be at Lexington, where they will be tendered a big reception, the feature of which will be an old-fashioned barbecue with a good roads rally scheduled.

Two cars were put out of commission this morning. The Franklin, entered from Jacksonville, Fla., ran into a farmer's wagon four miles from Roanoke and sustained damages which resulted in indefinite delay. The farmer is reported to have been badly injured. While crossing Chestnut Creek, thirty-five miles out from Roanoke, a pin in the Maxwell blew out. The two cars may rejoin the other autoists at Charlotte Sunday.

GREAT VANDERBILT CUP RACE TO BE RUN TO-DAY

Twenty-six Cars To Contest For Famous Trophy—Fantastic Scenes Among Thousands of Automobiles.

FOUR CLASSES OF CARS TO RUN SIMULTANEOUSLY

GARDEN CITY, L. I., Oct. 29.—Although the race for the Vanderbilt cup will be started at 9 o'clock in the morning instead of at daybreak, as in former years, the same fantastic scenes which in former years have made the night before the race so picturesque and weird were enacted again to-night during the hours which preceded the unleashing of the twenty-six cars which will start as competitors for the famous trophy.

Beginning at nightfall, the roads leading to the grandstand and to the vantage points along the course were alive with the whir and clatter of automobiles, churning their way past sleeping farmhouses and through deserted stretches, while the lamps drenched the darkened way with light.

Nearer the course, the machines came to be numbered by thousands, and peanut vendors, hot coffee hucksters, fruit peddlers and thrifty farmers with everything to sell, from sandwiches and programmes to parking places, mingled with the crowd crying their wares.

For many, the one-time classic "Derby" was made the occasion for a general celebration. Following a precedent which had kept them out of bed on all previous Vanderbilt cup preludes, they prolonged their feasts at the after-the-play restaurants and made a late start for the course.

Those whom circumstances had deprived of the advantage of an automobile were abroad earlier, intent upon preempting the first row at the turns and at other points from which death and annihilation may be witnessed. Increased morbid interest attaches to this year's contest, owing to the fact that the race must be run over a circuit which is but 12.64 miles long. This means that there will be twice as many turns as when the course measured 23.46 miles. When it is considered in addition that there will be twenty-six cars running simultaneously instead of seventeen, as was the case last year, and that the drivers are not as experienced as those of former years, some idea of the danger may be had.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken, however, to rob the course of one of its chief perils by banking all of the turns. At the same time this assurance against spills offers an incentive to reckless drivers to take the turns at full speed and without throttling down. Four of the drivers—Strang, Chevrolet, Seymour and Haupt—were at the wheel of cars participating in the Vanderbilt last year, and interest centers on these veterans. Strang, who will pilot one of the Fiat cars, is looked upon by many as a sure winner. He has a formidable rival, however, in Chevrolet, who was at the wheel of the Buick. A close contest between the two is promised.

The contest is complicated this year by the bringing together of four classes of cars, running simultaneously for three sets of distances. The smaller cars will cover the circuit ten times; the intermediate class will circle the course fifteen times, and the big cars, which alone are competitors for the Vanderbilt cup, will be called upon to go around twenty-two times. A bond for $100,000 to protect the county of Nassau against damage and loss through the race was filed this afternoon by Wm. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., on behalf of the authorities conducting the race.

SIZES UP THE BREWER TEAM

Manager McCloskey Returns To Louisville After Signing His Contract.

IS AFTER ANOTHER CATCHER.

Expects To Secure An Outfielder From Chicago White Sox To Take Strunk's Place.

TO TRADE CATCHER MORAN.

JOHN J. McCLOSKEY, the Louisville baseball man who managed the Milwaukee team of the American Association last year, returned home yesterday. Mr. McCloskey went to the city made famous by beer several days ago and signed a contract to lead the Brewers next season.

About five or six new ballplayers are needed and will be secured for the Milwaukee team if the right fellows are on the market. Such is the opinion of Mr. McCloskey. Another catcher to help Art Hostetter—and two catchers if Hostetter is out of the game—will be needed. One or two infielders not on the Brewer line-up last year will be on deck in 1910; one new outfielder to replace Amos Strunk and one or two new pitchers.

That it was much too early to dope out the lineup for next season is the remark made by McCloskey. The manager declared that he is already at work on lines to strengthen the team, although he is of the opinion that with Hostetter in shape he can take last year's team and win the American Association pennant. Failure to win the flag this season is laid to the illness of "Old Hoss," which could not be avoided.

"I signed the contract submitted to me by Mr. Havenor after glancing at it a minute," declared the chieftain. "I am satisfied with the conditions and Mr. Havenor is satisfied with the manner in which the team was conducted."

McCloskey accompanied Owner Havenor to the Milwaukee ball park to take a look at the improvements now in progress. The enlargement of the park and the general plan of improving it made a hit with McCloskey. After his visit to the park he spent a half hour with Hostetter. "Old Hoss" is not suffering any pain now, but is very weak and will not be able to leave the city for at least ten days. Then he will go to Hot Springs to stick until he has regained his health. "Old Hoss" expects to be in harness next season and fit to play the best ball of his career.

"It is difficult to say how the team will line up next season," said McCloskey. "In the outfield Jack Barry and Newt Randall will be in their old positions, and I cant' ask for an improvement in that direction. In center we may have to get a new man in Strunk's place. He belongs to Connie Mack, and I shall make an effort to purchase him outright. Just now Strunk is not hitting hard enough for the big leagues, although his fielding is great. I don't want him as a loan because he would have to be returned by August 29, and at that time of the year it is hard to get a good outfielder.

"Charlie Moran will not be with the team. I am now trying to work a trade for him whereby we can get Catcher Ludwig. With Hostetter and Ludwig working behind the bat that department will be all right.

"Harry Clark's job at third base is cinched. Clark played grand ball all season and may do even better next year. Both Robinson and McCormick are good men, but whether they will be on the team cannot be told now. Dan McGann may be back on first. His playing made a hit with the fans.

"The pitching department is in pretty good shape, but one or two new men may be needed. Curtis and Pape are likely to stick in the big leagues. Dougherty will not be sold because he is one of the best pitchers in the American Association. Schneiberg is booked for a workout with Brooklyn, which club drafted him. McGlynn will be on deck, as will Manske and Wacker and Stowers. 'Bugs' Raymond, dropped by the New York Giants, has written me saying he would like to catch on with Milwaukee. 'Bugs' is a great pitcher. I had him with me in St. Louis and know how to handle him so that he delivers the goods."

Herrmann and Murphy Make Up.

Cincinnati, Oct. 29.—All the differences, misunderstandings, ruffled feelings and managerial abrasions resulting from the sharp correspondence between President Charles W. Murphy, of the Chicago National League Baseball Club, and Chairman August Herrmann, of the National Baseball Commission, have been smoothed over and healed by the suave, gentle diplomacy of Charles P. Taft.

Under the soothing influence of Mr. Taft the Chicago magnate and the chairman of the National Commission shook hands to-day and renewed old friendship. As a result of the meeting, however, the $500 fine imposed by the National Commission against the Chicago Club over the Pfeffer matter remains intact, and also Murphy must pay $1,500 for Cole as a direct purchase instead of $300 on a draft.

New Baptist Church.

Horse Cave, Ky., Oct. 29.—Workmen are engaged excavating for the foundation for the new Baptist church that will cost $7,000. The old church has been rolled back on the lot and will be used by the congregation until the new one is completed.

The Modern Idea: "Good Individual Tailoring at the Price of Non-Individual Readymade."

Up-to-date Tailoring

Like all good tailors we keep abreast of all the developments of fashion; some, not good, do not. Whatever is new we know of it; and we have the right kind of cutting skill to make clever use of it.

But that is the least there is to uptodateness in tailoring. It is one thing to be able to buy but a few yards each of a limited range of fabrics, and another to get goods from the mills, in mill lots, at mill prices. It is one thing to have to put up with the old slow costly and antedated ways of making as must most tailors, but another to have a vast army of expert workers and every modern facility for good quick work and economical production.

All this plus an interest in each and every order not paralleled by any other tailor distinguishes the most up-to-date tailoring business in all America—ours, if you please.

JEFFRIES AND JOHNSON SIGN FOR GREAT BATTLE

Heavyweight Pugilists Agree To Meet For the Championship of the World Not Later Than July 5, 1910.

LITTLE TROUBLE IN ARRANGING THE DETAILS

REFEREE NOT DECIDED ON.

SIDE BET OF $10,000—STRAIGHT MARQUIS OF QUEENSBERRY RULES TO GOVERN.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries—for the negro insisted that, as champion, his name should go first—signed articles in New York late this afternoon binding them to fight forty-five or more rounds to a finish, not later than July 5, 1910, before the club offering the best financial inducement, the winner to take a side bet of $10,000 and 75 per cent. of the purse and the loser to take 25 per cent.

The preliminary discussion was scheduled for 2 o'clock in the banquet hall of the Hotel Albany. Jeffries and his manager were punctual to the minute, but Johnson elbowed his way diffidently through the crowd ten minutes late. At the table, as men took their places, sat Jeffries, with Bob Vernon at his left, Sam Berger, his manager, at his right and other well-known sporting men.

Jeffries eyed the negro curiously, but did not meet his glance. Johnson was affable, but showed his nervousness by his frequent grins and his constant clicking of two red dice, which he harried half concealed in the palm of his right hand.

Both principals posed for the photographer and when the smoke of the flashlights had cleared promptly got down to business. Jeffries let Berger do his talking, but Johnson broke in frequently on his manager, George Little, with suggestions and objections.

It was agreed without dispute that the men would box for the "heavyweight championship of the world."

At this point Johnson insisted that the present champion's name should precede the retired undefeated champion's name in the written agreement. To this Jeffries quickly assented. Berger than suggested that the fight go to the club making the highest responsible bid within the next thirty days. Little agreed, but Johnson, shaking his head dubiously, asked that each bid be accompanied by a $5,000 forfeit as a guarantee of good faith. Jeffries nodded and Berger gave his assent.

"And have a man on the ground with the coin," stipulated Johnson. The stenographer inserted a clause to that effect.

About the Referee.

So far it had been easy sailing, but when the question of a referee was raised the crowd edged forward expectantly. Little, for Johnson, wanted to name his choice. For the first time Jeffries broke in.

"Let the club that gets the bid have a word," he ordered. "They've got as much at stake as we have. Let it wait."

Little was arguing the point, but Johnson was all conciliation. "Well, let it go," he urged, "that's all right."

The number of rounds was next in order. "So far as I go," said Jeffries, "I don't care if its six, ten, twenty or a hundred rounds; but I know what the public will demand and I am going to see they get it—it means to a finish."

At this the crowd cheered until Bob Murphy had to outroar them for order. But Johnson was not satisfied. He feared a San Francisco club, where only twenty-round bouts are allowed, might get the bid, and in that event insisted that twenty rounds should be specified.

"Then Frisco won't get the fight," announced Jeffries decisively. "Make it forty-five rounds or more."

Swallowing his objections, the negro agreed.

Agree On Side Bet.

There was still the rock on which most agreements split—the division of the purse. To the surprise of the crowd, both men protested that they were willing to fight, winner take all, or 60 and 40 per cent., or 75 and 25 per cent., and on the latter basis it was settled.

The side bet caused more difficulty. Jeffries wanted to wager $20,000. Johnson, more cautious, offered $5,000. Little, his manager, wanted to lay the money at ringside odds, "as a business proposition." As a compromise they agreed to let the $5,000 already posted to secure to-day's meeting stand, with $5,000 additional to be added by both.

"All right," assented Jeffries plaintively, "but I wanted that twenty thousand."

A great roar of laughter went up from the crowd, and even Johnson grinned. Bob Murphy, manager of the Hotel Albany, was chosen as temporary stakeholder, the final stakeholder to be chosen by the club.

"No suh," said Johnson. "I has a say where my money goes."

"The club has more to say than either of us," put in Berger.

"No man has more to say about my money than I have," affirmed Johnson, shaking his head, yet he yielded, while protesting.

Now only one crucial point remained: "When would they fight?"

Not Later Than July 5, 1920.

As a finish fight had been agreed upon, it was the concensus of opinion at the matchmaker's table that either Nevada or California must get the winning bid. With thirty days for the bids to come in and sixty days more for the men to condition themselves, the weather at the earliest would be too wet in California and too cold in Nevada.

Both men agreed that, to accommodate the huge crowds sure to attend, the bout must be held out of doors. Berger further urged the necessity for ample training time.

And it was formally settled that a day "not later than July 5, 1910," be chosen. The deal was closed.

Again the principals posed for the flashlight men, champagne was served while the articles were being typewritten, and at 5:40 the binding signatures were affixed and witnessed.

The Articles of Agreement.

The articles follow:

"An agreement entered into this day between Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries provides for the following:

"First—They agree to box for the heavyweight championship of the world.

"Second—They agree to box before the club, organization or person offering the best financial inducements.

"Third—Bids for the contest must be submitted on December 1, 1909, at 3 p. m. at the Hotel Albany, New York City.

"Fourth—Each club, organization or person making a bid for this contest must have a representative on the ground who will post $5,000 in coin or certified check to make good any and all stipulations of his bid.

"Fifth—The referee is to be selected when the club bid is accepted.

"Sixth—It is hereby agreed that the contest shall be of forty-five rounds or more.

"Seventh—The purse shall be divided 75 per cent. to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser.

Straight Queensbury Rules.

"Eighth—Each of the contestants herewith posts with Robert P. Murphy, of New York, as temporary stakeholder, the sum of $10,000. Of this sum each posts $5,000 as a wager or side bet on the result of the contest and $5,000 as a forfeit to guarantee compliance with these articles.

"Ninth—The contest shall take place not later than July 5, 1910.

"Tenth—It is hereby understood and agreed that the contest shall be fought under straight Marquis of Queensbury rules and with five-ounce gloves.

"Eleventh—The final stake and forfeit-holder is to be decided upon when the club is selected.

"Witness our hands and seals this 29th day of October, 1909.

"JAMES J. JEFFRIES.

"JOHN ARTHUR JOHNSON."

Jeffries returned from Europe a week ago and Johnson came East from Chicago for the meeting to-day. Both men have many theatrical offers and both their managers said that they would probably "scoop in a little expense money" before going into strict training. Jeffries has been doing gymnasium work since his arrival here.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIG FIGHTERS.

JEFFRIES.

Jim Jeffries was born at Carroll, O., in 1875. He has never been beaten for the championship. He retired from the prize ring and gave his title to Marvin Hart, who lost it to Tommy Burns, who in turn lost it to Johnson. His great fight was in 1900, when he whipped Corbett in twenty-three rounds. He whipped him again three years later in ten rounds. His last fight was in 1904, when he beat Jack Munroe in two rounds.

JOHNSON.

Jack Johnson was born March 31, 1878, at Galveston, Tex. In the last seven years he has fought almost sixty battles. Only two defeats are registered in that time. Marvin Hart beat him in 1905 in twenty rounds at San Francisco. That same year he lost to Jeanette on a foul at Philadelphia. He scored seventeen knock-outs in the seven years. His career reached its climax last December, when he whipped Tommy Burns in Australia.

Williams Awarded To St. Louis.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 29.—A decision holding that the draft by the St. Louis American League club of Player Williams from the Monmouth (Ill.) club was valid was announced by the National Baseball Commission late to-day. The player had been released by the Lincoln (Neb.) club to Monmouth with an option to recall. The commission holds that under the circumstances, notwithstanding the Lincoln club had exercised its option, the rules had been violated by the player failing to report to the Lincoln club previous to the first drafting day. The draft held by St. Louis is held to be valid, and the player is awarded to that club.

No Chance To Get Konetchy.

St. Louis, Oct. 29.—"There is absolutely no truth in the rumor and positively no chance for New York or any other club to get Konetchy," is the way Roger Bresnahan, manager of the St. Louis National League team, replied to a query to-day regarding the New York reports that Konetchy was to be traded for Herzog and Merkle of that club. The message was sent from Bresnahan's home in Toledo, O.

DROPS DEAD WHILE ON HIS WAY HOME

HERBERT ENGLISH SUFFERS FATAL HEART ATTACK.

COMPLAINS OF FEELING ILL TO A DRUGGIST.

END COMES IMMEDIATELY.

Herbert English, 49 years of age, the proprietor of a grocery at Seventh and St. Catherine, died suddenly of heart failure in the drug store of Albert Struby, at Twenty-sixth street and Portland avenue, at 8 o'clock last night. Mr. English had been down inspecting a moving picture show near Twenty-sixth street and Portland avenue and apparently had gone up to the corner to wait for a car.

He went into the drug store and complained to Mr. Struby of feeling very ill. Mr. Struby administered a restorative, but it seemed to have no effect. A moment later Mr. English toppled over unconscious.

Dr. George Payne was called, but by the time he arrived Mr. English had died. Dr. Payne made an examination and announced that death was due to heart failure, superinduced by acute indigestion. It was learned from friends of the dead man that he had been suffering from stomach trouble for several days and had been under the care of a physician.

Mr. English was not married. He lived with his mother, Mrs. Anna English, at 827 West Jefferson street. Mrs. English is feeble with age and when she was notified of the sudden death of her son she collapsed, and attendants were unable to revive her for more than half an hour. She is under the care of a physician.

Besides his mother, Mr. English is survived by one brother, Harry English.

BRANDENBURG AGAIN A DEFENDANT IN COURT.

New York, Oct. 29.—Broughton Brandenburg, the magazine writer, acquitted here not long ago of selling to the New York Times a spurious article credited to Grover Cleveland, was haled into court to-day by his wife, charged with abandonment and non-support. He was held in $500 bond until to-morrow. Brandenburg said that he was anxious to return to St. Louis, where charges are pending against him for enticing away his stepson.

MANUAL LOSES A FINE BATTLE

St. Mary's Eleven Defeats the Reds In a Sensational Game.

SCORE COMES NEAR CLOSE.

Crimson Warriors Put Up a Wonderful Contest, While High School Boys Look On.

FORWARD PASS FIGURES.

BOTH sensational and surprising was the ending of the game yesterday afternoon between the elevens of St. Mary's College and Manual, which was won by St. Mary's team by the score of 6 to 0, the same score that it defeated High School at the beginning of the season. Almost in darkness, and with two minutes of play remaining, Schultze, the St. Mary's left end, caught a long forward pass, scurried by a substitute who had been sent in at quarterback for the Reds a few minutes before and crossed the goal line with the only touchdown of the game.

Despite their defeat, the Manual boys played a strong game, and there were many who said that they outplayed the Catholics. For practically all of the first half, and most of the second section, the play was in the visitors' territory. The St. Mary's representatives used the forward pass with the best form of any team seen on a local field this season, and successfully completed nearly every one that was tried. Punting was an important feature, and this the booters of both teams did excellent work. Manual had success with the onside punts, due, in a great degree, to the speed of Paine and Richardson. The latter were also present on the defense, Paine, especially, getting around his opponents' line and throwing the runner. The St. Mary's ends, Schultze and Swope, did high-class work, and though not as speedy as their opponents helped in the completion of the collegians' forward passes. In addition, Manual found considerable difficulty in making gains around Swope. Capt. Berle played a star game, gaining much ground with his quarterback runs. Sims hit the Red line hard for great gains and did fine work in advancing the ball.

The game started with McDonald kicking off thirty yards to Miller, who returned ten yards. Miller hit the Green line for five yards, but White failed to gain. Miller booted the leather thirty-five yards and White got down the field in time to fall on it. Berle got in one of his runs on a fake forward pass, by which he reeled off twenty-three yards.

Paine tried a dropkick from the twenty-seven-yard line, but the pigskin went wide of the crossbar. For the rest of the half Manual and St. Mary's struggled in the latter's part of the field, punting and bucking the line. Paine tried another dropkick at twenty-five yards, which, like the other, did not go near the goal. The half ended with the ball in St. Mary's possession on their own fifteen-yard mark.

Paine started the second session with a thirty-five-yard kick, which St. Mary's failed to return, being tackled immediately after McDonald had passed to Doerhofer. They were too close to their own goal line for comfort, and immediately punted. The Reds lost the ball at once on a forward pass and the college team made seven yards on an end run. The next two downs brought no gains, and they were forced to punt. Both Manual and the visitors brought the ball within striking distance of the goal on several occasions, but nothing could be done in the way of scoring. The Louisville boys lost their last hopes when Paine, in attempting to make a drop kick, fumbled. When St. Mary's bunch brought the pigskin within a few yards of the Crimson's line their supporters regained confidence, but the Manual boys broke through the line several times in succession, and threw the Green and White runners for losses, and it was confidently believed that the score would be a tie. The Catholics made a number of good forward passes, but the gains made were small, as Manual's ends tackled the runners before they had advanced any distance.

The ball was on Manual's thirty-five-yard line, in St. Mary's possession, and Schultze slipped across the field. Then Hogarty turned and sent the ball over to him with a long pass, which went straight into his hands. A few seconds later he had passed Duncan, Manual's substitute quarterback, putting him out of the way with a straight-arm jab. The next minute he was across the goal line. Doerhofer kicked goal. In the remaining seconds Manual worked hard to tie the score, and on the kickoff the St. Mary's runner was tackled as soon as he caught the ball.

It is claimed that with Berle in the game the result might have been different, but the battle was so closely contested that only a little point was required to win it.

As St. Mary's defeated High School by the same score the "dope" on the Thanksgiving day battle is somewhat complicated, but the Purple team has improved considerably since the first game. The entire High School team was at the game and watched the contest with considerable interest. These players were greatly pleased that their old rivals had not come out any better than they had. After the game Capt. Charles Hardin expressed himself as being confident of the result of their battle with the Reds, despite the game the latter put up. The lineup:

Manual.	Positions.	College.
Paine	Right end	Swope
Benedict	Right tackle	McMara
Kirk and Simons	Right guard	Dinelle
Hoerter	Center	Wheeler
F. Johnson and Feaman	Left tackle	Cardwell
Richardson	Left end	Schultze
Berle and Duncan	Quarterback	Hogarty
White	Right halfback	McDonald
L. Johnson	Fullback	Syme

Officials: McIlheny, referee; Rounds, umpire; Buechel, field judge. Time of halves, twenty-seven minutes. Touchdown, Schultze. Goal from touchdown, Doerhofer.

Killed By Train.

Mayfield, Ky., Oct. 29.—Relatives of William Johns received news of his death at Clinton. An Illinois Central train ran over him. He was 83 years old and leaves many relatives in Graves and Hickman counties.

SENT WORK AWAY

Bread Taken Out of Local Workers' Mouths.

FOREMAN TELLS OF GRINSTEAD ADMINISTRATION EVILS.

WILL VOTE DEMOCRATIC TICKET FOR FIRST TIME.

OTHERS THINK THE SAME WAY.

"I have been a Republican all of my life," said Wilbur Codey, foreman at the United States Cast Iron Pipe Company, last night. "I voted for Taft, I voted for Willson and I also voted for Grinstead the last time, but I shall never vote the Republican ticket again. I have become convinced that the present 'reform' administration is mostly a dream and that the only thing to which they aspire is office and not the good of the whole people as they hypocritically claim. I have become convinced that the working class of people need expect nothing from the present city hall gang and so I am going to register my first Democratic vote for W. O. Head, whom I believe will be the Mayor of the whole people."

Mr. Codey seems to express the opinion of the majority of the employes of the old Dennis Long Company's plant, who say that they are for the entire Democratic ticket. Many of these men were stanch Republicans, but flinging national issues aside they are doing all in their power to oust Grinstead and elect a man who is pledged to inaugurate a policy of protection for local capital and home labor.

Other Cities Get Contracts.

The change of these men has come about through the granting of contracts to foreign corporations instead of giving them to home industries. One of these instances has become notorious. For many years the Dennis Long Company has been supplying the city with its water pipes and the material and the prices have always been satisfactory. This not only helped to make this plant one of Louisville's largest industries but gave employment to hundreds of workingmen. When the "business methods" of the Republicans became popular, things were suddenly changed and the contracts began to be awarded to out-of-town corporations. Sometime last year bids were called for on 1,700 tons of cast iron water pipe, and among the bidders were the United States Cast Iron Pipe Company and an Alabama concern. When the awarding of the contract was announced it was found that the Alabama corporation had picked the plum. Its bid was declared to be 75 cents lower on the ton than that of the home firm and therefore the "reformers" announced, "We have saved the taxpayers $1,275."

"Saving" Was a Loss.

But a closer examination of the facts showed that there was not the slightest ground for the boast, as not only had they made a contract that expended more than $575 needlessly, but took many thousands of dollars from home industries and workingmen.

The United States Cast Iron Pipe Company, as was its custom for many years, would have delivered the pipe throughout the city wherever needed, but the out-of-town firm was under no such an obligation and therefore when the material arrived it cost the city the neat sum of $1,850 to have a transfer company distribute it. The amount "saved" subtracted from $1,850, the amount is cost to deliver the pipe, leaves $575, or the amount that the pipe ultimately cost more than if the contract had been kept at home.

This the men employed at the pipe foundry realize and say that they will vote accordingly.

"They cannot fool us by smooth denials and long-winded protestations," said another of the men last night, "idle days speak louder than words. We, or at least the majority of us, have made up our minds that 'Head's the man.'"

Threw 300 Out of Work.

According to R. G. James, superintendent of the United States Cast Iron Pipe Company, more than 300 men were thrown out of employment last winter when the Republican administration gave the contract to the Alabama firm instead of to a home industry, for said he:

"We were relying on this job to keep us running and of course when we lost it we were forced to close down." The company has a pay roll of about $5,000 a week and the foundry being closed about seven weeks entailed a loss of $35,000 to the workingmen of Louisville and ultimately to the business men who depend on this class of people for their livelihood. The "shut-down" came in the dead of winter and at a time when these men and their families needed every cent of their earnings to secure the necessaries of life. Many of them were forced to secure employment at odd jobs in order to eke out an existence.

"WE ARE GOING TO USE THE POLICE NOW," SAID BURLINGAME

Dan H. Russell Quotes What Mayor's Secretary Is Alleged To Have Said To Him.

Dan H. Russell says that when Paul Burlingame, secretary to Mayor Grinstead, gave a statement to the morning Republican organ purporting to be a conversation between him and Mr. Russell, he did not state all the conversation that occurred between him and Secretary Burlingame on a Fourth-avenue street car Wednesday night. He said that the part which Mr. Burlingame gave to the morning organ was simply the end and not the beginning of the conversation. In regard to the conversation Mr. Russell said:

"As we were riding out on the car I began to josh Mr. Burlingame about the police being in politics. I said to him:

"'I see that you have got the police in politics.'

"'Well,' replied Burlingame, 'you fellows used them in 1905 and we are going to use them now.'

"I replied that I did not blame them for taking every advantage they could, but that I did not approve the actions of the police in 1905 myself. I told him that they had better take down their billboards advertising no police in politics and stop their orators from proclaiming such on the stump. He then made the reply quoted by him in the Republican morning paper.

HEAVY GUNS

WICKERSHAM ON STUMP FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINEE.

RICHARD CROKER IN NEW YORK FOR ELECTION.

FIRST TIME IN MANY YEARS.

New York, Oct. 29.—With United States Attorney General Wickersham bitterly attacking William J. Gaynor in behalf of the Republican-Fusion ticket, they scattered oratory, redfire and invective pretty nearly all over Greater New York to-night with the municipal election only two working days away. Hundreds of minor mass meetings were held in the five boroughs.

W. R. Hearst, Independent, spoke three times on the East Side; William J. Gaynor, Democrat, spoke in Brooklyn and then came to Manhattan, while Otto T. Bannard, Republican, beginning in the theater district, swept downtown, then up into Harlem.

Hearst, keeping up his appeal to the "common people," struck a popular chord to-night by announcing that if he was elected Mayor he would hire a spacious hall where he would appear at stated times for a "heckling" at the hands of the people—to answer their questions and to receive their advice.

Talks of Fraudulent Votes.

Leaving this topic, he spoke of ballot-box stuffing, a subject which he felt especially competent to touch upon, he said, in view of his experiences in 1905, when he was defeated for Mayor. Fraudulent votes defeated him then, he had maintained ever since, and he said to-night that he was prepared to meet repeating at the coming election.

"Forty-six Tiger cubs have been sent to Sing Sing," he said, "and we expect to send a regular Hudson-Fulton parade to the same place during the coming month. But we are going to kill the Tiger this year—kill him and skin him and nail his hide to the wigwam."

Mr. Bannard, abandoning the financial affairs of the city for a night, spoke principally of the police, and personal liberty, a subject which has been used principally by Gaynor. The police department, he said, should be removed entirely from politics and the enforcement of the law should be reasonable, but not spasmodic.

Wickersham On Stump.

Attorney General Wickersham, speaking in Mr. Bannard's behalf, added a bit of national flavor to the campaign.

"I am not here as a federal official or a member of the President's Cabinet," he said, "but as a citizen and taxpayer of New York. In this capacity, despite my federal office, I feel it my privilege and my duty to aid in this effort to put competent and honest men at the head of the affairs of the city.

"Pre-occupied with the intense competition of their business, men are prone to leave the business of city government to professional office-seekers and to those whose occupation is of such a character that they naturally combine political with business activity.

"Only when confronted with conditions as in the present campaign is the average New Yorker stirred from his absorption in his personal business to turn to the affairs of the city. The appalling revelations of mismanagement of city affairs call urgently upon every citizen of New York to redeem the city from its present reproach. Every consideration demands a concerted effort to defeat the Tammany gang.

Calls Gaynor a Demagogue.

"The Mayor of New York is indeed one of the most potent executives of the world. To what kind of a man then would a citizen of New York, concerned only with the selection of an honest, efficient administration or of this vast estate naturally turn? Surely not to a judge whose course upon the bench has been characterized by political chicanery and demagogic appeals to popular favor; surely not to the proprietor of a chain of newspapers distinguished for their unbridled license and their gross abuse of the liberty of the press. No, he naturally would turn, as those who framed the fusion ticket did turn for their candidate for the mayoralty, to a man of wide successful business experience. Such a man they found in Otto T. Bannard."

Denies Charges.

Judge Gaynor, speaking first to old neighbors in Brooklyn to-night, took the defensive and leaned on his record. He denied that he had ever been on trial for violation of a tenement-house law, as has been charged by his detractors.

As to the charge that he had a monthly income of $1,200 from tenement rents, the truth was, he said, that he owned property assessed at $6,000 and mortgaged for $14,000, yielding him 3 per cent. on his investment.

Robert R. Moore, Democratic candidate for Controller, brought suit to-day for $100,000 for libel against William R. Hearst because of an article printed this morning in the American charging that Moore had been used as a "dummy" to obtain large loans for Charles W. Morse.

FORMER BOSS IN GOTHAM.

But Croker Says He Is Taking No Interest In the Election.

New York, Oct. 29.—For the first time since his retirement from the Tammany leadership several years ago, Richard Croker is in New York City during the heat of a mayoralty campaign. Mr. Croker is here from Europe, he insists, solely for the purpose of visiting socially with his old friends and spending the winter in the South. He crossed on the steamer Mauretania.

Free enough with talk on any other topic, he was dumb on the subject of local politics, except to declare with more than his usual emphasis that he was out of that field for all time. Mr. Croker said he was looking forward with pleasure to his coming visit to his place at Palm Beach, Fla., and next week would find him on his Florida estate.

"I am out of politics absolutely," Mr. Croker declared when the perennial question was asked. "I know it is no use to expect the press to let up on the question, and I must continue to deny any participation in public affairs. If I did not reply they would think I had something on my mind."

Mr. Croker was accompanied by Mrs. Stella W. Bowman, a niece, and Miss Emily Croker, a cousin.

Death Ends Long Illness.

Glasgow, Ky., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—Will Wade, aged 67 years, one of the best-known men in Southern Kentucky died at his home in Scottsville, Allen county, after a lingering illness of stomach trouble. He had been interested in the Love Boyd Lumber Company for years, but on account of ill health had practically retired. Mr. Wade was a son of the late Dave Wade, of Glasgow, a wealthy pioneer settler of Barren county, and is survived by three sisters and one brother, Mrs. Bruce Evans and Mrs. Ben Smott, of Glasgow; Mrs. Lillie Jones, of Tennessee, and Jim Wade, of Glasgow. He is survived also by his wife, who was formerly Miss Mary Boles, of Glasgow.

POLITICS

Has Little Effect On Business Conditions.

FURTHER PROGRESS MADE IN TRADE EXPANSION.

HIGH COST OF TEXTILES COMPLICATES MARKET.

WHY THE SOUTH KNOWS.

New York, Oct. 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade to-morrow will say:

Further progress is making in trade expansion and financial conditions are more settled, while politics, in spite of the nearness of election day, do not materially affect the business situation. The reports from the leading trade circles are so uniformly favorable as to leave no question of doubt as to the widespread character of the revival. It is probably within due bounds to say that at no previous period of its history has the wealth of the United States made a better showing of growth than it is making at the present time.

Faith In Future Business.

If further evidence of the rapid expansion in iron and steel were needed, it is furnished by the report of the steel corporation for the third quarter, and the appropriation of $10,000,000 for new construction work, which testifies to the confidence shown in a steady growth of business in the future. The leading railroads continue to make liberal purchases of needed equipment, recent sales of rails aggregating 80,000 tons. New business comes forward slowly in structural lines. More interest is shown in the wire trade than for some time past, and current sales are of good volume.

Complication In Textiles.

The maintained high costs of wool and cotton add complications to the merchandising of textiles and tend to force irregular productions, yet merchants agree that the demand is broadening in distributing channels just as it has been expanding in primary centers for some weeks. Stocks in retailers' hands are reduced and orders for fall have been so conservatively placed that the rush for immediate delivery of seasonable merchandise forces higher prices, and jobbers are asking that orders for deliveries in December be set ahead. Premiums are being offered for quick delivery of several kinds of knit goods. Prices are marked up daily and are already at a high level, although not up to 1907. Hopes of export trade with China are less sanguine, but the year's figures of export trade in cotton goods are still favorable.

Footwear Market Improved.

Improved conditions are still reported in the footwear market, but some lines continue neglected. Heavy staples are selling well, and shipments from Boston show an increase. Heavy trading characterized the packer hide market, with branded hides for sole leather purposes particularly active. Trading in sole leather has improved appreciably, many fair-sized sales being made in the Boston market, where stocks of Union, Hemlock and Oak are low.

TRADE IS GOOD.

Continues To Improve Along Most All Lines.

New York, Oct. 29.—Bradstreet's to-morrow will say:

Trade as a whole is good or better, the former word, in fact, hardly sufficing to characterize the buoyancy and breadth of demand shown in many lines. Industry, in turn, responds with advices of full manufacturers' order books, full or overtime run, and general reports of an insufficiency of skilled labor to meet requirements. Altogether the situation is, all things considered, a very satisfactory one, and the rate of improvement in the late months of the year promises to place 1909 close to the front in the list of years of prosperity.

Large Volume of Trade.

While mild weather has tended to retard retail trade in some sections of the Northwest, the general report is that the advance of the season and the marketing of the year's crop is bringing out a large volume of trade in the country districts, while enlarging payrolls, fall festivals and State fairs are all helping to stimulate distribution in the cities. Jobbing trade keeps pace with, and in some cases exceeds, final distribution as regards encouraging reports, dry goods, clothing, millinery, shoe and kindred lines all reporting good demand despite the generally very high range of values of all commodities.

Holiday Trade Good.

Early reports as to the holiday trade are also very good. Spring trade is reported of good volume, and it is noted that while advances in prices of cotton goods are still a brake on fullest activity in these lines, the general movement even here is toward enlarged sales.

A number of mills announce shorter time in operation, the coarser products showing the most strain. Iron and steel are being produced in large volume, though some advices of ease in pig iron are noted.

Business Failures.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with October 28 were 217, against 244 last week, 241 in the like week of 1908; 223 in 1907; 163 in 1906 and 160 in 1905.

Business failures in Canada for the week numbered 24, which compares with 30 last week and 32 in the same week of 1908.

Wheat exports, including flour, from the United States and Canada for the week ending October 28 aggregate 4,200,449 bushels, against 5,694,466 last week and 5,463,714 this week last year. For the seventeen weeks ending October 28 exports are 47,316,179 bushels, against 71,806,114 in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 516,448 bushels, against 395,592 last week and 196,514 in 1908. For the seventeen weeks ending October 28 corn exports are 2,700,685 bushels, against 1,186,115 last year.

BUSINESS OF THE BANKS.

Increase of 24.3 Per Cent. Shown In the Clearings At Louisville.

New York, Oct. 29.—Bradstreet's bank clearings report for the week ending October 28 shows an aggregate of $3,484,322,000, as against $3,745,182,000 last week and $2,561,458,000 in the corresponding week last year:

AUTO SHOW

MAY BE HELD IN LOUISVILLE NEXT SPRING.

President Straus, of Automobile Club, Says It Would Bring Revenue Into the Treasury.

In the president's letter for October, published in the "Toots," the official organ of the Louisville Automobile Club, Eugene Straus suggests an automobile show for next spring, and it is said the plan is causing a deal of discussion among local motorists. If properly handled President Straus states that such a show would bring revenue into the club's coffers, and it would also give dealers an opportunity to display their new cars. The letter follows in part:

"The first annual reliability and economy contest, which we have just completed, is a perfect score for the club, with the exception of a misunderstanding on the part of one of the contestants. This was unfortunate for the contestant, but the committee was obliged to adhere to the rules and penalize this car. Every one else is delighted with the contest.

"Arrangements are already being made for the contest of 1910. The officers and the contestants, who are members of the club, are to act as this committee.

"The second and probably the last membership campaign is now on in full force. Under the head of 'Club Notes' you will find a list of the members of this committee.

"Every member of this club should feel it his duty to get one (and as many more) new members as possible.

"At the semi-annual meeting, I read the paper which I called 'Frenzied Finance,' and outlined the possibilities of a clubhouse.

"This paper seemed to make quite an impression on the members present. It is my belief that with a membership of 400, with annual dues of $12, the Louisville Automobile Club can own an elegant home, with all conveniences, whereby members can go to their business in their cars, leaving them under shelter and well-protected during the day. In going to the theater or rainy evenings when downtown there will be a good place to put your car.

"An automobile show for next spring might be discussed. Clubs in other cities have them. Why can't we. If properly handled this show could bring a revenue into the club. It would also give every automobile dealer in Louisville an opportunity to display his new car. Written suggestions from any automobilist will be greatly appreciated.

"EUGENE J. STRAUS,

"President of the Louisville Automobile Club."

FIRE DESTROYS HUGHES' LUMBER YARD

PRESIDENT WITTY ESTIMATES LOSS AT $75,000.

STARTED IN GLAZING ROOM FROM UNKNOWN CAUSE.

ONE OF OLDEST COMPANIES.

Fire destroyed the buildings and material in the lumber yards of W. J. Hughes & Sons Company at Fourteenth and Maple streets early this morning. The loss, as estimated by A. P. Witty, president and general manager of the concern, will reach $75,000, which, he says, is covered by insurance. Thousands of people were attracted to the yards by the fire and the heavens were lighted up for miles around. The fire was plainly seen from every point in the city.

The fire originated in the rear of the glazing room and was discovered at 12:10 o'clock this morning by William Wise, night watchman for the Louisville Varnish Company, whose plant is situated near by. The alarm was turned in by Wise and soon the fire engines and hook and ladder companies were flying to the scene of the blaze. A second alarm was turned in and quickly a third alarm followed, which took all the fighting equipments almost in the city to the yards. It was soon discovered that the lumber plant would be a total loss and the efforts of the firemen were turned toward saving adjoining and nearby buildings. The flames raged for over an hour and a half.

Shortly after the plant caught fire the home of J. T. Nichols, 1415 Maple street, was discovered to be on fire. Mrs. Nichols and two children were rescued from the building unhurt, but the building was destroyed. It was valued at about $500. All the furniture and clothing were saved.

The lumber yards of W. J. Hughes & Sons Company were established about thirty years ago. Since the death of W. J. Hughes, who was president of the company, A. P. Witty has been president of the concern. Mr. Witty was at a loss last night to know how the fire originated.

Five cars loaded with lumber on a switch at the yards were burned. The loaded cars were not discovered until the fire in the yards had reached such a headway that it was impossible to save them.

The Rev. J. H. Dame Dies.

Madisonville, Ky., Oct. 29.—The Rev. J. H. Dame, one of the oldest ministers in Hopkins county and Western Kentucky, is dead at the age of 70 years. He was well known throughout this section. He is survived by a wife and four children.

Financial and Commercial

MONETARY.

Friday Evening, Oct. 29.—Despite preparations for November 1 settlements, which are unusually large, the New York call money market was unchanged, the ruling rate being 4 per cent. The time money market was easier, there being some loans made at 4½ per cent., while the ruling rate for other dates was 4¾. Indications were that to-morrow's bank statement would be fairly good. The local market was fairly active. The borrowing demand continued good, with the ruling rate 6 per cent.

STOCK MARKET REVIEW.

New York, Oct. 29.—Money on call firm at 3@4 per cent.; ruling rate 4; closing bid 3¾; offered at 4; time loans easier; 60 days 4½ per cent.; six months 4½@4¾; prime mercantile paper 5@5½. Sterling exchange steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.83@4.8325 for 60-day bills and at $4.8730 for demand; commercial bills $4.82. Bar silver 50¼c. Mexican dollars 43c. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds firm.

To-day saw a considerable revival of speculative interest in the stock market. The cause of this revival was found in the easing of the money market and the confidence manifested that these conditions would further relax with the passing of the November first-money settlements. The sources of supply of the additional funds offered in the money market was believed to be London, where, it was reported, private bankers had been induced to replace some of the accommodations recently recalled in response to the maneuvers of the Bank of England to raise the interest rate in the London money market in order to attract gold to that center.

The attraction for this operation, according to cabled reports from the British capital, was the payment of a commission to the bankers by the American borrowers, which amounted to a sharp premium over the interest rate ruling in the money market there. The feeling that, with the passing of the stock market settlement and the November payments, money markets will relax, seemed to obtain in London as well as here.

The resumption of American borrowing in London, however, marks a defeat for the expressed policy of the Bank of England, when it set about to obtain control of the London money markets and to make its advance in the official discount rate effective. The possibility came into discussion, therefore, of further defensive measures by the bank to defeat this movement.

The week's currency movement has been against the New York banks, according to the preliminary estimates, although the net result is ameliorated by the shipment of funds from the interior, the balance in favor of New York being estimated at upward of $3,000,000. On Subtreasury operations, however, the banks have lost $3,271,000, while gold exports to South America and to Canada have taken an additional $3,475,000. The maintenance of the surplus reserve at as high a figure as last week is dependent, therefore, upon a reduction in the deposit liability through loan contraction. Whatever the clearing-house showing may be, the additional supply of funds to loan made themselves obvious to-day.

The stock market proved broad and active and a comprehensive advance in prices was effected. The covering operations of a substantial short interest left outstanding as a consequence of the recent bearish activity of the professional element were given credit for a good part of the day's buying. There was evidence in addition of a resumption of operations on the long side of the market from the same hands which have been responsible for some of the important movements in recent stock market history.

Vigorous recoveries in some of the stocks which have hung back in recent movements, notably the Hill railroad group, were a feature of the day. United States Steel still absorbed a large proportion of the total dealings, and its aggressive advance formed an effective leadership. This was supplemented by fresh strength in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading. The copper industrials held a conspicuous position in the day's advances. Rumors were persistent that an understanding had been arrived at amongst the principal producers which would redound to their common benefit. No official confirmation could be had for these reports, but the fact of conferences between persons mainly concerned gave color to the reports.

The bond market broadened out quite materially and there was a substantial demand in small lots which suggested investment buying. The tone was firm. Total sales (par value), $4,452,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

LEAF TOBACCO.

Friday Evening, Oct. 29.—The offerings on the local breaks were light and of medium quality. Old dark predominated and brought fairly good prices. New (1909) Burley to the extent of 55 hogsheads brought prices on a level with preceding days this week. The highest price for Burley was $18.75 and for dark $11. A large increase in offerings of new Burley is expected next week, as receipts are heavy.

CATTLE TRADE QUIET—HOGS ACTIVE AND STEADY TO 15c HIGHER—SHEEP UNCHANGED.

Louisville.

Louisville, Oct. 29.—Cattle—Receipts in the local market to-day were very light—only 99 head; for the week thus far only 3,910. However, light as the supply was, there were fully as many cattle on sale as were needed, owing to the slackness of the demand, which is customary at the close of the week, and especially at the end of a fourth week of liberal receipts. The trade was slow; choice butchers steady; medium and common kinds dull. The feeder and stocker trade was practically unchanged; high grades in excellent demand; medium and plain grades slow; common trashy kinds dull; bulls steady; canners and cutters dull; milch cows unchanged. No heavy shipping cattle here. The pens were pretty well cleared this evening.

Quotations: Prime export steers $6@6.50; good shipping steers $5@6; beef steers $3.25@5; fat heifers $3@4.25; fat cows $3@4; cutters $2@3; canners $1.70@2; bulls $2@4.50; feeders $4.25@4.75; stockers $2.25@4.25; choice milch cows $35@45; common to fair $15@25.

Calves—Receipts 87 head; for the week thus far 629. The market ruled steady; best 6¾@7¼c; medium 4½@5½c; common 2½@4c.

Hogs—Receipts 3,915 head; for the week thus far 16,754. The demand was good and trading fairly active. Top hogs were steady, but lights and pigs were higher; selected, 165 lbs. and up, $7.60@7.75; 130 to 165 lbs. $7.40@7.50; pigs $7.40 down; roughs $7 down. The pens were well cleared and the market closed firm.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts 92 head; for the week thus far 931. The market ruled dull and draggy without any quotable change in conditions; choice fat sheep 3@3½c; common very dull; best lambs 5½@6c; butchers 5@5½c; culls 3@4c.

COTTON MARKETS.

New York, Oct 29.—There was a very active business in the cotton market again to-day, and in spite of heavy realizing, as well as the reactionary tendency of sentiment in some quarters, prices made new high records in the late trading and closed strong at a net advance of 5@25 points. The market opened irregular at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 7 points, with considerable selling for a turn, owing to disappointing cables and reports published by some of the morning papers that Mr. Patten had liquidated his long cotton. These sellers were surprised, however, by aggressive support from foreign bull leaders right after the opening, while friends of the Chicago operator denied that he had sold his cotton, and inside the first half hour prices sold 20@22 points net higher, with January making a new high record. A reaction of several points occurred during the middle of the day, owing to cables from Liverpool reporting that members of the International Federation of Master Spinners had decided to run their mills only four days a week up to December 4, and advices from Montreal claiming that Canadian mills would curtail 20 per cent. from November 1 to January 1. But there was good buying on a scale down and the market later developed the greatest strength and excitement of the day, with December contracts selling at 14.69c and May at 14.87c, or 25@28 points net higher, all months making new high records for the season. The close was at practically the best on active positions. The big spinners' takings for the week and strength in the Southern markets were the factors in the late advance, together with continued support from Southern bulls. Southern spot markets were 1-16@⅛c higher.

Spot market opened quiet; middling uplands 14.85c; do gulf 14.85c. Closed quiet and unchanged. Sales 9,800 bales.

Receipts at the ports to-day were 75,596 bales, against 86,163 last week and 75,737 last year; for the week 425,000, against 448,026 last week and 449,979 last year; to-day's receipts at New Orleans 10,830, against 10,488 last year, and at Houston 11,771, against 20,575 last year.

Futures opened steady and closed strong. The range for the day was as follows:

Futures opened steady, 2 points down to 6 points up. Cables were sensationally bad and the ring was flooded with offerings from the opening gong, but bulls bought all the cotton the bears had to offer and then bid for more. The market was steady all day, with its strongest period in the last hour of trading, strangely enough after the receipt of a cable message from Liverpool stating that the English Federation of Master Spinners had voted to work only four days a week until December 6. On the bulge in the afternoon May was sent over the 15c level, and all months made new high records for the season. The advance was based on large exports and a strong spot demand. At the highest prices were 20@22 points over yesterday. The closing was very steady, within a point or two of the top. The range for the day was as follows:

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Predictions of a material falling off in shipments of wheat from Russia were the basis of considerable strength in the wheat market here to-day. The close was firm, with prices ¼c to ½@⅝c above yesterday's final figures. Corn and oats followed wheat and closed firm, while provisions were strong.

The news from Russia was a marked factor at the opening of trading and was mainly responsible for an advance of ⅛c to ⅜@½c on initial transactions. Although prices reacted at times owing to realizing sales, sentiment was bullish the greater part of the day, shorts being fair bidders. Reports from the Southwest to the effect that offerings of wheat from the interior were on the decrease, prompted some buying. During the day December sold between $1.05⅛@1.05⅝ and $1.06⅛@1.06¼. The market closed firm, with December at $1.05⅝.

An official forecast of unsettled weather for the corn belt caused considerable covering by shorts in the corn market, which resulted in a firm tone throughout the day. The market closed firm, with prices ⅛@¼c compared with the previous close.

Oats were firm because of a brisk demand by shippers for the cash grain. The bulk of trading was in the May delivery. At the close prices were a shade to ⅛@¼c higher.

Provisions were strong all day owing to a general investment demand based on continued light receipts of live hogs throughout the West. Total arrivals of hogs to-day at the principal Western centers were more than 35,000 less than the combined movement for the corresponding day a year ago. The market closed strong, with prices unchanged to 40c higher.

DECISION OF PROTEST COMMITTEE IS FINAL

LOUISVILLE AUTOMOBILE CLUB MAKES LETTERS PUBLIC.

PROTEST OF MARSHALL-CLARK COMPANY PASSED ON.

THE VERDICT MUST STAND.

Since the publication of the statements made by the Marshall-Clark Motorcar Company, the executive committee of the Louisville Automobile Club announces, with a feeling of justice to the referee and the members of the technical protest committee, that the letters written to the Marshall-Clark Motorcar Company in reply to their protest should be published. Copies of the letters follow:

"Louisville, Ky., Oct. 14, 1909.—Report on protest of Marshall-Clark Company as to penalization of car No. 4 in the contest:

"The rule book shows Lexington as a checking station, being marked 00.0 miles and designating the point at courthouse. The card produced by driver shows that car arrived in Lexington at 4:21 and left five minutes after, making the leaving time 4:26. The running time from Lexington to Winchester was one hour and thirty-nine minutes. Add this to 4:26, gives the time of arrival at Winchester at 6:05 p. m. The card shows arrival at 7 o'clock, same being fifty-five minutes later. Deduct two minutes allowed, leaves fifty-three minutes penalty.

"The card also shows that at several checking stations the car left ahead of time. This was in direct violation of a rule which subjects the driver to disqualification—penalization being a lighter burden, disqualification is not insisted on. It was the duty of all drivers before signing the card to see that the time was entered right and these rules could not be set aside by any observer.

"We also notice on the observer's card the first day that the engine was choked when stopping, and this possibly should have been added to the penalization.

"In view of the foregoing, we affirm the decision of the committee.

"J. F. ROSS,
"WALTER I. KOHN,
"J. M. CHATTERSON, Referee."

"Oct. 15, 1909.—Messrs. Marshall Clark & Company.—Gentlemen: The protest committee of the Louisville Automobile Club accepted all the evidence produced by you in writing; also the substituted card showing time at Lexington control, and rendered its decision on that evidence. That decision was filed with the club on October 14. The club refused to allow the committee to withdraw the report on request of the referee, and therefore the report must stand as the verdict upon your protest of the referee's decision. The position of the committee is that, under the rules, the decision is final, the club having no power to refer the decision of the committee and referee back for further action. Yours truly,

"J. M. CHATTERSON, Referee."

The members of the executive committee of the Louisville Automobile Club are Walter I. Kohn, Dr. Enos Tuley, Robert C. Morris and Eugene Straus.

BIG RALLY

Held by Independent Republicans Last Night.

GEORGE D. TODD SAYS WORD TO NEGRO VOTER.

WARNS HIM AGAINST PERFIDY OF PRESENT ADMINISTRATION.

OTHERS ADDRESS MEETING.

One of the greatest gatherings of the campaign thus far held by the Independent Republicans was held last night at Germania Hall, First and Jefferson streets. George D. Todd, W. H. Sweeney and Jack L. Richardson spoke. Mr. Todd's speech, in part, follows:

"At the close of this campaign I wish to call the attention of all Republicans to an extract of a speech made by President Taft October 21, 1905, at Akron, Ohio: 'If I were able, as I fear I shall not be, because public duty calls me elsewhere, to cast my vote in Cincinnati in the coming election, I should vote against the municipal ticket nominated by the Republican organization.' This, my Republican friends, is a good example for you to follow. If President Taft could afford to vote against the Republican municipal ticket in Cincinnati, nominated by a machine, you certainly have justice on your side by voting against the nominations made by a committee who received their credentials at the notorious April primary, 1908.

A Word To the Negroes.

"I wish to say something to my colored fellow-citizens, who have seen my friends in former political battles. I have always been the friend of the intelligent and law-abiding negro and expect to be his friend whether he supports me in this race or not. The Grinstead organ, which heretofore has denounced the negro in the most inflammatory editorials, now comes forward and appeals to them to save the Grinstead administration. You want to read one short editorial in the Grinstead organ, date June 13, 1907. 'The Republicans have not got the State. They are very far from getting the State. With a NEGRO CONTINGENT, BLATANT, OFFENSIVE and VICIOUS, with the NEGRO VOTE TRANSFERABLE LIKE A BILL OF EXCHANGE THROUGH THE ELECTION CERTIFICATES, with the Todd element in the city and the Hunter element in the State, with the spoils hunters and the pot lickers all actively at work, all vicious and vociferous, the indications are that the Republicans are preparing once more to throw away the State.'

"Now any intelligent colored man (after reading this short editorial from the man who has more to say in the Grinstead administration than all other citizens in Louisville) can vote for the Grinstead administration is past my comprehension.

Grinstead Ineligible.

You have all, doubtless, been made aware of the fact that Mayor Grinstead is ineligible to succeed himself as Mayor and the candidate getting the next highest number of votes that will be the Mayor of Louisville should he get the highest number of votes cast on November 2 next, and any one who votes for Mayor Grinstead, Sheriff Scholl, Assessor Ryans and Tax Receiver McCulloch will throw his vote away.

"I have advocated from the beginning of this campaign, six street-car fares for 25 cents or twenty-five car fares for $1, lower water rates and free water connections; cheaper gas and electricity. All of these things the people are entitled to, as they get them in other cities north of us. Why not take the stand that you will get as much from the public utility corporations as the citizens of other States. If you vote for me next Tuesday, you will have a Mayor in office who will live up to the charter and handle the city's affairs in an economical manner.

Meeting of Post D.

The regular monthly meeting of Post D, Travelers' Protective Association, will be held to-night at the Louisville Hotel. It is reported that there is something in the wind and the officers all urge that all the members be present if possible. There will be some good speeches.

If you have good business judgment you'll ALWAYS find some ads. in this paper to interest you.

MAJORITY BALKS

Nine Grand Jurors Do Not Whitewash Police.

THREE, HOWEVER, TELL HOW EXCELLENT THEY ARE.

ALL AGREE THAT REGISTRATION WAS VERY FAIR.

IN THE COURTS YESTERDAY.

In their final report, made yesterday to Judge Joseph Pryor, of the Criminal Court, the members of the October grand jury all unite in congratulating the city on the fairness of the last general registration. Democratic and Republican officers both, the report reads, have testified before the grand jury that the registration was the fairest ever held in Louisville. For the first time in the memory of the Criminal Court attaches, however, there were two reports, a majority and a minority report.

Nine members of the grand jury did not subscribe to the most excellent "character" given the police department by three members of the body. These three made a report saying that the city was freer now of gambling, illegal trafficking in liquor and other disorder than ever before. They complimented the police as being "diligent, intelligent and honest."

These three referred to the indictments against Billy Limp and Dave Jones, naming no names, but saying that the indictment had been made to appear as an indictment against the police without warrant. The three jurors who signed the minority report were John J. Barret, foreman of the grand jury; Clifton H. Solger and T. H. Wingate.

Except for the bouquet for the police and the Grinstead administration the reports were identical, one being part of a copy of the other. The nine members who refused to subscribe to this clause of the minority report, were: C. C. Carter, John H. Hinkebein, Joseph Callaway, Robert Hegan, A. J. Dignan, John H. Dresel, Ed J. Coggeshall, Henry Freuchtenicht and Fred Bicker.

All members of the jury joined in the report in commending the condition and management of all of the county institutions.

The jury recommended that a stenographer be employed for the grand jury and for the Commonwealth's attorney's office and that a building be erected for the colored patients at Lakeland Asylum. The grand jury held nineteen sessions. When the jury convened there were 120 prisoners in jail waiting for a hearing before the members of the grand jury. All of these cases were not heard.

The members of the grand jury cautioned the next grand jury to look carefully into the alleged sale of registration certificates.

The grand jury reported the following conditions in the Jefferson county institutions visited: Louisville Industrial School, male 320, female 142; jail, men 186, women 20; workhouse, men 94, women 25; city hospital, men 93, women 85; Home for the Aged and Infirm, women 108, men 157; County Poor House, men 16, women 6; Central Insane Asylum, men 797, women 621. These institutions were reported in good condition.

Indictments returned yesterday were: Assault and Battery—William Robinson.

Pointing a Deadly Weapon—John Oliver and John Thomas.

Dismissed—T. L. Shur, assault and battery.

Bonding Company As Prosecutor.

On a plea of guilty to the charge that he had converted funds of Star Council, No. 669, Knights and Ladies of Security, to his own use, W. E. Hill, who acted for several years in the capacity of financial agent of the local council, accepted a sentence of one year in prison. The defendant's shortage amounted to $924, and his peculations, according to the terms of the indictment, extended over a period of seven years, the money having been taken in small sums. The National Surety Company, which was on the bond, made the losses good to the council and was actively represented in the prosecution by Norton Goldsmith. The shortage was discovered last winter and the case was postponed in the Criminal Court from time to time. When the proceedings came to an issue this morning Hill agreed to enter his plea of guilty.

To Support His Family.

By an order entered yesterday in Judge Miller's court, the Fidelity Trust Company, as a committee for William B. Pegram, a person of unsound mind, is permitted to pay out of the income of the estate of its ward $75 a year for the care of the patient at the asylum at Lakeland and $50 each month for the support of his wife and daughter. It was set forth in the petition filed earlier in the day that the estate had a value of about $10,000, and as now invested would yield an income of about $650 a year. The Trust Company was named as committee in Judge Pryor's court yesterday morning.

Court Paragraphs.

—Theodore Evers sued Caroline and Jacob Krankel and the Louisville Trust Company for $1,250, alleged due on a note.

—Robert Henry Wolff, in the name of Nettie Wolff, sued Alfred P. Maas for $5,000 as damages, alleging malicious assault.

—Beate R. Osborne sued the Louisville Railway Company for $20,000 as damages for injuries she suffered when she fell from a car.

THIS THE LAST DAY TO PURGE REGISTRATION

TOTAL OF EIGHTY-FIVE NAMES STRUCK OFF TO DATE.

COUNTED EVEN BREAK BETWEEN BOTH BIG PARTIES.

ABOUT ONE THOUSAND CASES.

Five names, by an order of the County Court, yesterday were stricken from the registration books for cause. The records do not state reasons. These five increase the total number removed from the books since registration to eighty-five. According to the impression of those who have watched the proceedings, this number represents about an even break between the Democrats and the Republicans.

Altogether 935 cases have been taken up since registration purgation proceedings were begun and to-day will see the thousand completed. This is the last day of the proceedings for the reason that the books will not be available on Monday, they being given out to the election officers on that date.

According to the registration purgation proceedings, the last registration is shown to have been the freest from fraud of any in the history of the city. The five names struck off the books at yesterday's session, which was completed by 11 o'clock in the morning, are as follows:

Paul Threedouple, Seventh precinct of the Second ward.

William Johnson, Twenty-second precinct of the Second ward.

Roger White, Fifteenth precinct of the Fifth ward.

George Deboe, Forty-first precinct of the Seventh ward.

Lewis Crawford, Twenty-fifth precinct of the Tenth ward.

Internal Revenue Collections.

The internal revenue collections yesterday were as follows: Lists, $11.46; beer, $3,130; whisky, $64,281.79; cigars, $325.05; tobacco, $11,606.64; special taxes, $22.92; case stamps, $92; total, $79,469.86.

LITTLE SUFFERER FROM ECZEMA

A SINGLE SET OF CUTICURA CURED HIM

"I feel it my duty to let you know with what success I have used the Cuticura Remedies. When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours in the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited seven months to see if it would return but it never has and today his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little one's suffering and also their pocket-books. (Signed) John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Nov. 3 and 17, 1908."

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

MRS. HAWES AGAIN ELECTED PRESIDENT

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY UNION ENDS ITS LABORS.

CLOSES YEAR IN STRONG FINANCIAL CONDITION.

WORKERS FOR KNOX COUNTY.

Encouraging reports were read by the various officers at the closing session of the eleventh annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Union of the Louisville presbytery of the Southern church at the Second Presbyterian church, Second street and Broadway, yesterday. The attendance this year was the greatest in the history of the organization. More than 350 delegates were in attendance from the forty-odd churches in the presbytery.

The nominating committee made its report at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. D. Hawes, Highland church, re-elected; vice presidents, Mrs. S. O. Sutherland, Flora Heights church; Miss Lucy Logan, Mulberry church, Shelby county; Mrs. G. C. Overstreet, Taylorsville, and Mrs. W. D. Collins, First church, Louisville; treasurer, Mrs. E. L. Tarry, Stuart Robinson Memorial church; recording secretary, Miss Alice Eastwood, Crescent Hill church; foreign corresponding secretary, Miss Bettie Grant, Second Presbyterian church; home corresponding secretary, Miss Clara Huber, Westminster church; secretary of literature, Mrs. A. D. Stoll, Goshen church, and missionary visitor, Miss Lucy McGowan, Crescent Hill church.

The morning session was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning by Mrs. Hawes, who presided. Then the reports of the officers of the presbytery were submitted. The report of Mrs. Tarry, the treasurer, showed that the organization was in good financial condition. Miss Eastwood, the recording secretary, read the report of the last meeting and was given a vote of thanks by the delegates for her indefatigable work. A condensed report of the foreign field was next read by Miss Bettie Grant, foreign corresponding secretary. Conditions in the Louisville presbytery, Synod of Kentucky, and the general assembly's work was discussed in the paper of Miss Clara Huber, home corresponding secretary. All of the reports showed the need of more workers and funds. A plea for more extensive reading of missionary literature was made by Miss Eugenia McCullough. The need and work of the different organizations in the synod were discussed by Miss Lucy McGowan in her report as missionary visitor.

Mrs. John Fulton, of Bardstown, told of the young women's work. One of the features of the morning session was the talk and "The Covenanters" by Bushrod Taylor, a youth of 12 years, who told of the work and object of the Covenanters' Society on organization of young boys from 8 to 16 years of age. "The Inconsistencies of the Missionary Member" was the subject of an address made by Mrs. J. B. Beard, of Lexington. Mrs. C. A. Knollenberg, of Shelbyville, the next speaker, pointed out that the way to get people interested in the union was to prepare interesting programmes at the meetings and always make the visitor feel welcome.

Following the adjournment at 12:30 o'clock luncheon was served by the women of the Second Presbyterian church in the gymnasium. The report of the nominating committee and the paper on "Six Weeks as a Bible Woman in the Mountains of Kentucky," by Miss McGowan, were the features of the closing session yesterday afternoon. Miss McGowan related in an interesting manner the work at the Knox Creek mission in Pike county. She discussed the conditions and pointed out the needs of the Knox Creek church. It is planned to send two women workers to Pike county and when contributions were asked for $100 was donated by the delegates in a few minutes. The meeting adjourned at 4 o'clock. The place of the next meeting is left to the executive committee, who will decide later.

In Need of Bedding.

(Communicated.)

The Associated Charities is very much in need of bedding. We have two families in which there is sickness, and they have not sufficient bed covering to be comfortable or to make recovery possible.

Comforts or blankets will be most acceptable. We will be glad to send for them if those who have any to give us will phone the Associated Charities office, Cumberland, Main 882.

OUTPOURING

Expected by the Democrats To-night.

FINAL RALLY AT THE COURTHOUSE.

PARADE BEFORE SPEECHS.

Every Democrat between the ages of one and ninety is invited to attend the final rally of the campaign to-night at the courthouse. The meeting promises to be the biggest demonstration Louisville has seen in years, and coming on the heels of a remarkable contest and on the eve of what promises to be an exciting election, the gathering will be a significant and unmistable evidence of the popular feeling.

Democratic managers declare that the Grinstead forces have been beaten from one end of the city to the other, and say that the Mayor will be lucky to carry three wards. The splendid manner in which the workingmen have fallen in behind the Head banner, together with the open revolt expressed by the public in general toward the city hall machine, is expected to attract a great crowd to-night.

The speaking will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and the most effective orators in Kentucky will deliver telling blows against machine corruption. The claims of the Grinstead campaigners, whose pleas have been getting weaker and weaker as the campaign has progressed, are expected to be riddled.

Five Separate Stands.

Five speakers' stands will be erected to-day, and the orators who will speak from them will keep things humming. There will be something doing every minute, and the five bands which will take part in the great parade of the marching clubs will furnish some excitement as the clubs arrive for the meeting. In every possible way the rally is expected to be the most interesting and the most enthusiastic of the campaign, and will be a splendid climax to Mr. Head's wonderful fight.

The Democratic nominee has made a really remarkable race. Going into the fight as a plain business man, leaving his desk for the speaker's platform, Mr. Head developed into a wonderful campaigner. Not possessed of particular gifts of eloquence, he has nevertheless made an impression on every crowd he has faced, because he has talked straight from the shoulder, and his frank and direct statements have made it plain to his hearers that he means what he says.

The Speakers.

Mr. Head himself will speak, and is promised a splendid reception. Others who will be heard also are: Congressman Ollie James, of Marion; Ward Headley, of Princeton; John S. Rhea, of Russellville; Col. John R. Allen, of Lexington; Pres Kimball, of Lexington; Lavega Clements, of Owensboro; Jere A. Sullivan, of Richmond; J. N. Kehoe, of Maysville; T. J. Baird, of Shelbyville; John K. Hendrick, of Paducah; William Young, of Mt. Sterling; John Welsh, of Nicholasville, and James Garnett, of Columbia.

Local speakers will include Mr. Head, Herman D. Newcomb, Democratic nominee for the State Senate from the Thirty-sixth district; Congressman Swagar Sherley, James P. Edwards, Col. Bennett H. Young, Norton L. Goldsmith, Judge Shackelford Miller and Scott Bullitt.

Clubs To March.

The part which the Democratic clubs will play in the meeting is no small one. Mobilizing from all parts of the city in the neighborhood of Fourth avenue to Broadway, the members of the clubs will march in Fourth avenue to Jefferson street, and down Jefferson street to the courthouse. Clubs which are from west of Fourth avenue will form in line on Broadway west of Fifth street and those whose members are from points east of Fourth will form on Broadway east of First street.

The county clubs will get ready to march on Fourth avenue south of Broadway. These clubs will get further instructions at a meeting at Beck's Hall this morning, when they will be addressed by Judge R. Frank Peak.

The clubs which will be represented in the parade are as follows:

The Kentucky Colonels, the Mose Green Club, the Watterson Club, the Young Men's Democratic Club, the Southern Democratic Club, the All-Wool Club, the Bryan and Liberty Club, the Dyed-in-the-Wool Club, the Old Guard Bryan Club, the First Ward Club, the Fifth Ward Club, the True Blue Democratic Club, the Andrew Jackson Club, the Peerless Club, the Oakdale Club, the West End Colonial Club, the Louisville Democratic Club, the Greenwood Club, the Bluegrass Club, the North End Club, the Young Lawyers' Democratic Club, the Tammany League, the Criterion Club, the Jefferson County Democracy, the Fourth Ward Club, the Highland Park Democratic Club, the Louisville Tammany Club, the Shelby Club and the South End Club.
